The South Goes Wet
This Lady Drinks Wine
Snake Venom Stops Cancer
A Deadly Rat Army

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

THOSE THAT HOPED the Southern States would keep prohibition in the Constitution were disappointed yesterday afternoon. First reports from Arkansas showed a vote of 4 to 1 against prohibition, while from Alabama it was 52 to 7. Some decided change might come, but it did not seem likely.

News that will puzzle sincere prohibitionists comes from France, where Madame Anne Fire, who lives in the wine-producing Macon region, has just celebrated her 103d birthday. Mother of nine children, she attributes her long life, good health and ability to read without glasses, to the fact that every day of her life since childhood she has drunk the wine produced by her countryside.

There is, of course, no 3.2 wine in existence. That imaginary wine was created by an intellectual Congress, that knows more about whiskey than about wine.

The French, as a matter of fact, drink their wine much weaker than 3.2, diluting ordinary wine with a great deal of water.

In Paris, Dr. Calmette, scientist of the Pasteur Institute, reports the growth of cancer in a white rat stopped by injecting venom from a cobra. Cancer in the white rat succumbed after 12 injections of venom, 10 of which, given all at once, would have caused death. This cancer treatment was discovered by Dr. Adolph Monae-Lesser, of New York.

One poison offsets another. Salvarsan treatment, which conquers one of the worst blood diseases, involves injecting arsenic into the tissues, enough to kill the germs, not enough to kill the patient. Malaria germs are used successfully to cure cases of paresis.

Someone will find a remedy fatal to cancer growth, but not fatal to the cancer victims.

Every possible misfortune appears to attack the unfortunate Chinese. Now a frightful plague of rats sweeps the southern part of the province of Anhwei, in East Central China.

The rats have polluted the water supply and threaten famine, while natives appeal for outside help, unable to fight the swarms of vermin.

Even this government might be interested, for a rat plague means other plagues, such as Asiatic cholera, and such things sometimes travel far, and rapidly.

How grateful Great Britain would be for some of the oil wealth that this nation pours out and squanders so carelessly. To make the British army and navy independent of foreign gasoline supplies, Prime Minister MacDonald announces an 8 per cent preference on distillates (substitute for gasoline), produced from British coal, in the next 10 years. In consequence, the British company, "Imperial Chemicals," will invest $35,000,000 in a plant to extract distillates from coal.

This will mean using about a million tons of British coal a year, and putting 7000 idle miners to work.

"Coal gasoline" can be produced for 14 cents a gallon. Foreign gasoline is laid down in British ports at four cents a gallon. But war might stop delivery. Intelligent Standard Oil of New Jersey, looking far ahead, owns in America the process that Britain uses to extract the coal distillates.

While the United States wonders whether it can afford to build an airship to replace the Akron, Germans are building a new dirigible twice the size of their Graf Zeppelin. At the same time the Graf Zeppelin is making regular trips between Germany and Brazil, carrying passengrs and mails profitably.

The new German dirigible will carry helium gas instead of oxygen, the latter used only for balancing the ship. A smoking room will be provided for passengers, which could not safely be done, hitherto.

Individuals have a great deal of initiative and energy in the United States, but until President Roosevelt came in, the American government showed little of either. It watchfully waited—and look what happened.

A "letter to the editor" suggests a whipping post to diminish crime. Another letter says the whipping post is torture, which it is, and defies Letter No. 1 to mention "any incident in history" where whipping has lessened crime.

Human decency should forbid its use, but the whipping post does discourage crime. When a plague of garrotting broke out in London, one man stepping behind a pedestrian, choking him, while the other robbed him, judges decided to try the lash. The moment a man was convicted he was tied up and lashed. Garrotting died out instantly.

ALABAMA AND ARKANSAS VOTE WET

Repeal Wins in Heart of Traditionally Dry South

By The Associated Press.

The traditionally dry South today watched mounting returns from Arkansas and Alabama definitely placing these states in the repeal column.

Figures from 1268 of the 2137 ballot boxes in Alabama showed 78,456 votes for repeal and 46,693 against in yesterday's referendum.

Arkansas' latest count from 1183 precincts out of 2046 in the state gave 56,501 for repeal and 36,375 against. This vote count included the complete tabulation in several counties and nearly complete returns from many other counties.

Yesterday's vote brought the number of states in record for repeal to 18, with prohibitionists yet to score their first victory.

Tennessee voters will register their decision tomorrow, with Oregon following Friday. Thirty-six states must vote for repeal if the prohibition amendment is to be nullified.

In addition to Tennessee and Oregon, 15 states have fixed definite dates before early November to vote on repeal.

States voting next month are:

Arizona, Missouri, Texas and Washington.

In September, six other states will give their verdict—Vermont, Maine, Maryland, Minnesota, Idaho and New Mexico; and in October, Florida.

On Nov. 7, repeal will be passed upon by North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania and South Carolina.

Although only 35 states have either voted or arranged to vote on repeal by Nov. 7, action is pending in several others which may bring the total number voting to more than 36. It is on this possibility that repealists rest their hopes for victory before Christmas.

2 DYING IN CAPE RUM BATTLE

Four Others Held in Seizure of 1200 Cases of Liquor

Two members of the crew of an alleged rum runner, the Whatzis, were probably fatally wounded in a raking fire from a coast guard patrol boat, the former rum runner Auf Wiedersehen, early today off Cape Cod.

The wounded gave their names as Ernest Hahn, 45, of Purchase st., New Bedford, and Joseph Russell, 30, of Friendship st., Providence. They are in a critical condition in Cape Cod Hospital, Hyannis, both greatly weakened from loss of blood.

When brought to New Bedford to await arraignment, other crew members gave their names as Thomas Murray of Hoboken, N. J., and Elmer Jarman and James Brown, both of New Bedford. Brown is but 18 years old. Murray formerly resided in Fairhaven.

Coast guards seized 1200 cases of liquor and 200 cases of Islay malt aboard the Whatzis, which was captured after a zig-zag chase of miles in the Cape waters. During the chase members of the guard crew were nearly blinded by a smoke screen laid down by the fleeing boat.

According to Boatswain's Mate Alfred E. Phalen, in command of the Auf Wiedersehen, the rum runner was traveling without lights and refused to stop even after a warning shot had been sent rocking across her bow.

BALBO'S AIRMEN FLY MOHAWK VALLEY

Oswego, N. Y., July 19 (AP)—The Italian fliers passed high above Oswego at 12:52 p. m. (E. S. T.), moving in over the mainland from Lake Ontario. They shaped their course toward Syracuse and the Mohawk Valley, pushed along by a 30-mile tail wind. (Details on Page 7).

CABINET MEMBERS FAVOR WAGE DRIVE

Washington, July 19 (AP)—The special industrial advisory board, composed of cabinet members, today formally endorsed the plans of Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, for a campaign to bring all industry and business quickly into wage-raising and hour-limiting voluntary agreements. (Further details on Page 5).

MATTERN OFF ON RESCUE PLANE

Moscow, July 19 (INS)—The Soviet air ace, Levanievsky, ordered to rescue Jimmy Mattern, American round-the-world flier, has lander at Anadyr, Siberia, where the U. S. pilot has been stranded, and planned to hop off with Mattern for Nome, Alaska, at 4 o'clock this afternoon, Greenwich mean time (noon E. D. T.).

DRIVE TO BREAK DOWN PENN'S UNION PLAN

Newark, N. J., July 19 (AP)—The Order of Railroad Telegraphers opened a membership drive today as the first step in a campaign which, union officals said, was directed at the overthrow of the Pennsylvania railroad's union plans.

Head Bowed Low

Mrs. Jessie Costello as she begins at the jail each day her hurried trip to court which has become known as "the Costello sprint." She bowed her head again today —not in shame or timidity; more to keep curious-minded folk from glimpsing the beautiful smile which usually lights her countenance. (Boston American photo.)

CROWD PLEADS FOR BLIND MAN

While a throng of men and women protested, two police sergeants and a traffic officer arrested a blind man in Hayward pl. today on a charge of obstructing the sidewalk, and put him in a taxicab.

Whe the blind man arrived at Milk st. station one hand was bleeding.

Several citizens later complained to police officials, charging brutality on the part of the arresting officers. The blind man was booked as Rex Overman, 28, of Commonwealth ave.

Exiled Trotsky to Seek French Refuge

Istanbul, July 19 (INS) — Leon Trotsky and his wife, who left Turkey secretly Monday night and are due in Naples, Italy, tomorrow, have definitely decided to make their home in France, it was learned here today.

The former Soviet leader has wearied of his exile in Turkey and intends to pick a new home near Marseilles.

SOCIETY FOLK SWINDLED IN COHASSET

Boston Man Held in "Starving Firemen" Aid Fund Fraud

Nearly a dozen members of the smart South Shore summer colony have been victims of a fraudulent scheme to relieve "the starving firemen" of Cohasset, it was today revealed in Quincy court.

Among the victims are J. F. McElwain, president of the W. H. McElwain Co. and leader in the boot and shoe industry, with a Beacon Hill home at 21 Chestnut st.; Eleanor Drinkwater, Cohasset and Boston; George [illegible] of 428 Beacon st., Boston; Harold Pitman of 57 Beacon st., Boston; Delano Wight of 44 Sumner rd., Brookline; E. E. Good and Alanson Bigelow.

All of these were named in a complaint, reading like a page from the Blue Book, charging Francis Ferry, 37, of 132 Beaver st., Boston, with larceny on seven counts.

EX-GOV. COX ON LIST

On another list found in Ferry's pocket when he was arrested, appeared the names of former Gov. Channing H. Cox, vice president of the First National Bank of Boston, and Mrs. Nathaniel Emmons, "Angel of the Yankee Division," who maintains a home in Hingham and is prominent in Republican circles and as a portrait painter and business woman.

Ferry was also charged with attempted larceny on two counts. He was given his freedom for a week in $400 bail because police are seeking some of his Social Register victims to appear against him as witnesses.

Cohasset authorities, who have been on Ferry's trail for three weeks, declare that he approached the wealthy vacationists with two other men, representing himself as an agent of the "starving firemen."

LARGE DONATIONS

In many cases he and his "committee" are believed to have received handsome donations toward their "relief fund," police said.

Ferry's undoing came last night when he paid a visit to the home of E. G. Howe, in ultra-smart Jerusalem rd.

Howe had been warned against his "charitable" operations and engaged him in conversation while another member of the household called police.

Ferry's two associates are now being sought. Chief Hector Pelletier of the Cohasset police holds warrants for both and declares that he knows one of the men.

Ferry himself entered pleas of not guilty today to both the seven-count larceny charge and the attempted larceny complaint.

1700 Pequot Mills Strikers Back on Job

Salem, July 19 (AP)—Seventeen hundred employes of the Pequot Cotton Mills returned to work today after their 10-week strike, which was settled Monday night. About 200 employes have obtained jobs elsewhere, but most of them were expected to be back by the end of the week.

There were 400 applications for jobs filed today with the company on the belief that a second shift would be put to work next week.

1600 Get Increase

Costesville, Pa., July 19—A general wage increase of 15 per cent was announced by Lukens Steel Company.

The Goose That Lays The Golden Egg

To the Editor of the Boston American:

THE editorial which you submit for my judgment contains the following notable paragraphs:

"In the emerging period of enlarged trade volume, business management will come into its own again.

"Modern business executives who use the methods of applied science will stand out from the rest even more conspicuously than in the past.

"The new competition will no longer be in the anti-social realm of sweating labor, but rather in inspiring well-paid workers to become MORE PRODUCTIVE THAN THE AVERAGE.

"Experience shows that of four ditch diggers, each will throw up unequal amounts of dirt during a day's toil.

"The efficient managers, whose golden era appears to be looming, will not only SELECT ABLER APPLICANTS, but will also, through inspiriting leadership, elevate the productivity of members of their staff.

"This influence will not only permeate the manual workers, but also the intellectual personnel.

"If the philosophy of the new Act is impartially carried into effect, the inefficient will either be crowded out of business or forced radically to improve their methods."

* * *

THIS idealistic editorial is valuable from one viewpoint, but is not based on a very wide experience with organized labor.

The effort of most organizers of labor is not only to get the most pay, but to give the least work.

The whole system of union rules, moreover, is based on the effort not only to limit labor but to limit productivity.

The quota of production is based on the capacity of the least skillful members of the union.

The methods of the union organizers result not merely in increasing compensation but in disproportionately increasing COSTS.

Union rules compel the employment of an unnecessarily large number of men on most jobs. They compel the retention of the less competent.

They tend to remove the control of the working force from the authority of your "business executives."

WET STOCKS IN HEAVY DROP

New York, July 19—Spectacular breaks in the liquor shares today weighed the stock market down and brought a sizeable shakeout.

The bulls rallied behind the rails, utilities and dairy issues at various times during the session in an effort to rally the list but were snowed under by a torrent of selling in the "wet" issues.

Weakness in commodities, cotton losing $1 a bale and wheat 2 cents a bushel added to the unsettlement. The dollar started off weak, with sterling back to par for the first time in nearly two years, but rallied later. Trading was at a wild pace.

SERVANT SAW COSTELLO'S BODY LYING ON FLOOR

Wife Phoned and Then M'Mahon Came; Her "Beating" Bared

By WIN BROOKS
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Salem Courthouse, July 19—That Fire Capt. Wliliam Costello may have committed suicide in fear of insanity after having retained no memory of an attack on his wife a month before his death, was the surprise defense conjecture outlined today at trial of his beautiful young widow for his murder.

On the heels of this dramatic testimony Mrs. Catherine Simbolist, one-day-week maid in the Costello home, testified that Mrs. Costello told her that "Bill," always made the liquid stuff for her to clean the boiler. Mrs. Simbolist said she arrived at the Costello home at 9:15 a. m. the day the fire captain was found dead. Mrs. Costello instructed her to begin her cleaning program with the boiler. The widow held out a coffee tin containing the poison liquid.

A few moments later, Mrs. Simbolist testified,

COSTELLO A SUICIDE WHILE LOSING MIND, DEFENSE THEORY

WIFE TOLD FRIEND OF NIGHT ATTACK BY HIM ON HER

"Hurled Over Bed and Beaten Blue"

John "Tip" O'Neil, government witness, under grill of Francis E. Rafter of counsel for the still smiling Jessie, admitted that on the day of Costello's death Jessie told him of trouble she had with "Bill."

He couldn't recollect the exact conversation and no amount of prodding by state and defense counsel could refresh his memory, but the bombastic Rafter, striding up and down the aisle in front of the jury box, wheeled suddenly toward the witness and shouted:

"Didn't Mrs. Costello tell you that four weeks before, Bill threw her over a bed, that she had to be strapped up and had black and blue marks on her body?"

EDWARD M. BRAWLEY

Costello Feared Loss of Mind, Says Rafter

"She may have, I don't recollect the exact words," O'Neil replied.

"And didn't Mrs. Costello say to you that when she told Bill about it afterwards he exclaimed, 'Oh, my God, I have no recollection of it! I must be going crazy!'?"

That, O'Neil admitted, might have been what Jessie told Jim, the conversation taking place a few hours after her husband's death.

Giggling women intruded upon the solmnity of Jessie's murder trial today and were given one last warning by Judge Frederick W. Fosdick, who threatened to clear the courtroom of all spectators, male and female.

O'Neil, whose father had died a few days before Costello's death, had admitted he embraced Mrs. Costello—a sympathetic embrace—when he met her after Bill's death and when Rafter inquired whether he had kissed her he exploded with a loud "No, I did not kiss her."

The 40 or more spectators, mostly girls and young women who had been chosen from the crowd of several hundred in front of the building, tittered.

Said Judge Fosdick: "If any of these female attendants feel they should express amusement, I should advise them to step outside and be amused there. I don't want to clear this courtroom, but I will if there are any more smiles or laughter."

Widow's Smiles Fewer and Her Hands Fidgety

Jessie's own smile was not quite so bright today. Plucked yesterday of her glamour by the State's defamatory opening—as some beautiful wild bird might be plucked of its soft plumage and held up with only the flesh and the pin feathers on display—she returned to court this morning still smiling, but not so often nor so broadly.

Her hands were restless, she fidgeted and every other minute she conferred with counsel.

Yet some of the colorful plumage torn from her yesterday in Dist.-Atty. Hugh A. Cregg's description of her as a scheming, unfaithful wife, plotting the poison murder of her husband, was restored today when two of the witnesses upon whom the government depends to send her to the electric chair, described her as a mother devoted to her children.

One of these was Edward M. Brawley, the Peabody High School history teacher, who, it developed today, had played Santa Claus in what Rafter described as a "Smith Brothers outfit," for the Costello children and others at a Peabody playground.

The other was O'Neil himself, a small, bird-like man of fine appearance, at whose father's wake Bill Costello discussed plans to act as pall-bearer a few hours before he himself was a corpse to be borne.

Brawley, under cross-examination, denied any unfriendly feeling for Jessie. Rafter harked back to his testimony of yesterday that Costello had laughed at the O'Neil wake and it turned out that the laugh resulted from a humorous comparison of his ball playing with that of George Herman Ruth. So Babe Ruth and Santa Claus were two unexpected personages introduced at the trial this morning.

Costello looked to be in good health at the O'Neil wake, Brawley said. Of the dead fire captain's life with Jessie, the State witness said:

"So far as I could see their life was reasonably happy."

Widow Told Him Bill Had Acted Strangely

O'Neil testified that Costello, the day before he died, showed no indications of sickness and ate a substantial meal of lamb chops. At midnight, a few hours before his death, he led a dozen or 15 people at the wake in saying the rosary. And when he left for home, when they saw him last alive, he said:

"I'll see you in the morning."

After his father's funeral, hearing of Costello's death, O'Neil said he telephoned the Costello home and asked to speak to Jessie.

Jessie, he said, did not answer the phone but later appeared at his home.

As near as he could recall, Jessie told him:

"I don't know whether you

Tense Moments as Poison Widow -:- -:- Battles in Salem Court for Life

MRS COSTELLO LEANED FORWORD TO CATCH EVERY WORD AS HER ATTY WM.CLARK QUESTIONED DR SAMUEL TUCKER ON HIS EXAMINATION OF THE BODY
SHANAHAN AT SALEM COURT.

Moments of cross examination have come in the trial of Mrs. Costello. Staff Artist Raymond E. Shanahan caught this view of the scene as William G. Clark took a state witness in charge. He was repeatedly advised by his client. Her keen observance of every detail brought about many protests from the woman, whom the state says poisoned her husband.

When she was led from the court, Mrs. Costello was still protesting that Dr. Samuel I. Chase Tucker had not told the truth when this sketch was made. Mrs. Costello won her first tilt of trial when Dr. Tucker admitted that of his own knowledge he did not know cause of Costello's death.

MRS. RACHEL CRAIG, JAIL MATRON.

SHANAHAN AT SALEM COURT

At every moment Mrs. Rachael Craig, prison matron, is close at hand to aid Mrs. Costello. There had been little need of cheering the beautiful prisoner until Dr. Tucker testified that in chatting with Mrs. Costello concerning her husband's illness, she said, "He complained of pains from the left shoulder down the left arm over the left breast into the gastric regions—the stomach." Then a frenzy of rage moved her.

JESSIE'S MOODS MATCH CREGG

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Salem, July 18—Jessie Costello is a puzzling, complex personality, a woman of varying moods and changing expressions into whose sybaritic beauty is insinuated excessive love and thought of self. She is a study in lights and shades, like modern art, unrevealing, unintelligible at a glance, as she sits in the courtroom—a modern Madame X into whose depths there is no sounding.

Behind piercing, dark eyes, bewitchingly glamorous, darkened by dark, unplucked brows, a veil seems drawn. A heavy veil cloaking the windows to an accused woman's soul.

Jessie Costello is an extremist whose emotions go from hot to cold and between them there is no happy medium.

She is not a simple type to understand. One couldn't say, by hastily appraising her, "there sits a clinging vine." Nor does she look like the "extravagant, deceptive, vulgar and profane" as the state pictured her.

There is an intriguing glamor about Jessie, not the bright colored kind, but an exotic glamor of magnetism.

Something about her olive-skinned continentalism that grips one. A sort of latinism that infuses a Cleopatran allure into her particular class of attractiveness.

There is something deep about Jessie like the ocean, great pools of darkness rolling one into the other in a vortex of sizzling humanity.

She looks appealingly human

Ely Vetoes $3891 Dead Lobster Bill

Governor Ely today vetoed a bill to pay Harry A. Patterson of Cohasset $3891.30 in compensation for more than two tons of lobsters killed by a fresh flow of water into Cohasset Harbor where the lobsters were located.

The state, it is claimed, was responsible for the fresh water because it lowered the dam on Gulf river in the course of mosquito control work. The Governor contends that Patterson had ample opportunity to protect his lobsters.

The Goose That Lays The Golden Egg

How can manufacturers pay high wages and allow short hours and still be compelled to limit production to the capacity of the most incompetent workmen, and to employ larger forces than are needed on any job, and to be unable to apply methods of efficiency because of the obstructive tactics of the unions?

* * *

REMEMBER, this memorandum is being written by a man who has supported union labor all his life, and who has written for over forty years that prosperity is based on the good wages which create purchasing power among the mass of the community.

I always have been and always will be in favor of organized labor.

I support the benefits of unionism, but oppose its abuses.

Union rules will have to be modified if the New Deal is to go into successful operation.

No manufacturer can possibly limit production, increase the cost of production, and still make enough profit to pay high wages and allow short hours.

The prices of the products would be prohibitive, and no community would have sufficient purchasing power under such conditions to buy freely enough to create prosperity.

The New Deal can only be made effective through reasonable co-operation between employers and employes, through the effort to supply good work in return for good wages, and through increased productivity as an offset to increased cost of production.

"Sweating" employers is as unwise as "sweating" labor: and extortion FROM employers is as dangerous as oppression BY employers.

Either one kills the goose that lays the golden egg.

* * *

THE only sound policy is to keep the goose alive by mutual toleration and co-operation: Get as many eggs as possible out of the obliging bird by scientific and efficient methods, and divide the output fairly.

If the government uses the immense powers of its Industrial Recovery Act without the greatest care and fairness and judgment, it is likely to revolutionize industry by standing it on its head.

The government should use its powers without bias or preconceived prejudice, and not for the advantage of one faction or another, BUT IN THE BEST INTERESTS OF INDUSTRY AS A WHOLE, AND THE COMMUNITY IN GENERAL.

With sincere co-operation between employers and employes, and with the government as arbitrator, and with the natural and inevitable improvement in the mechanics of production, higher wages CAN be paid, shorter hours CAN be given, productivity CAN be increased, and the prices of products CAN be reduced to the consumer.

That is the ideal and possible goal.

Will it be attained?

MOVE TO DISBAR STATE STREET LAWYER

Byron W. Reed Faces Charge of Converting Clients' Cash

Petition for disbarment of Byron W. Reed, State st. lawyer and member of the bar since August 23, 1910, was filed in supreme court today by the Boston Bar Association.

Judge Henry T. Lummus appointed Sidney R. Wrightington to prosecute.

The petition alleges Reed converted to his own use $175 given him July 22, 1932, to pay Atty. Benjamin Brown of 6 Beacon st., counsel for L. Eugene Shattuck, in settlement of a $2000 note.

A second charge is that Reed on Jan. 15, 1932, received $200 as attorney for Mrs. Bessie K. Ray, administratrix of the estate of her husband, Joseph G. Ray, in payment on a mortgage note for $1417 made by Antonio Godin, but that Reed concealed the collection from her.

Another charge is that Reed caused Mrs. Ray to execute a false statement to the Department of Corporations and Taxation which included a false item of $1000 as counsel fees paid him.

$150,000 NOTE BRINGS $85,500

Judge James A. Lowell in Federal Court today authorized transfer of a $150,000 promissory note, dated March 1, 1930, and payable five years after date, to Leon David of Boston and Nathan David of Newport, R. I., upon receipt of $85,500 cash, such transfer to be without warranty of any kind.

The note was found among the assets of the closed Federal National Bank by Receiver Herbert Pearson. It is signed by the Rhode Island Theaters, Inc., and endorsed before delivery by the Olympia Theater, Inc. It is secured by a mortgage of real estate in Newport, R. I., and recorded in the office of the city clerk there.

PRECIOUS NOTES OF LOVE

Whatever dour mood possessed David Hutton to refile papers for divorce certainly wasn't reflected in his wife, Aimee Semple McPherson. Love letters revealing Aimee's devotion for her mate were given out today—and how fondly Aimee regards her recent letters from Hutton—well, the picture tells its story. (International News Photos.)

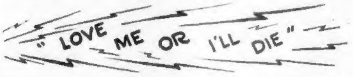
Evangelist Pleads for Aid to Whip 'Cockeyed World'

Los Angeles, July 19—Deep emotion was eloquently portrayed by Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton in love letters she dispatched so hopefully to the United States from France in the few weeks preceding the filing by David L. Hutton of his divorce action here.

"Dear Head of Our House," she wrote on June 30, "remember I love you and will never fail you or let you down.

"I am married to the loveliest family in the world; I am a Hutton, not a Semple or McPherson or Aimee—I am Mrs. David L. Hutton.

"My heart swells with the pride of it. Trouble cannot touch us, Mister Man. We'll button up our overcoats of love, put up our umbrellas of loyalty and let her rain."



"LOVE ME OR I'LL DIE"

It was on July 4 that Aimee really opened her heart to David. She wrote:

"Boy, Oh Boy," She Sighs

"My Beloved Treasure:

"Another long day is almost ended. Old Glory is floating from the roof of the American Hospital (in Paris). New patients arriving, old ones check out. Baflows on within and outside the heart of the great city throbs, but my heart and mind constantly revert to my gorgeous husband, his love, his words, and his caresses.

"Each day I try to picture you —where you are, what time it is by your watch, whether you are home—in your room, eating, sleeping — dressing — drinking— singing, longing for your wife, or discouraged with her, or—oh, everything.

"Sometimes I wonder when I get home whether you can be half so wonderful and half so real——

"Boy, oh boy," she signs in bold, black ink. "We'll never be partbies are born and sick, weary folk fall into their last sleep.

"The life of the busy hospital ed again with this baby's consent.

"Oh, Daddy, you will love me, won't you?

"Say yes, or I'll just curl up and die.

"Let us be very kind to each other; life has hurt us both—let's never hurt each other again."

And then, in the same long outburst of emotion, she continued:

"I love you, Mr. David L. Hutton; this little woman has not only given her heart and happiness into your keeping, but has vested you in her mind's eye.

"A king—a tender lover—a student of God's word, a doer of His will—a fine artist, musician, a lover of the classics, and worthwhile things in life—a humorist, a brave, dauntless soul, a thoroughbred—man's man, a sport, a dutiful and loving son, magnificent friend, as true as your eyes are blue and as clean in body and in spirit as the day you were born."

Again, in deep reverence, as indicated by preceding passage, she continued:

"Oh, David, let us make a closed corporation of three— Jesus, you and I."

"Whip Cockeyed World"

"Let us make friends, great friends, friends worthwhile. Let us laugh, love, live, play with others—keep them—but let us have a secret stronghold of love and devotion—a flawless, inviolate ivory tower, whose threshold no other foot shall cross but just we three."

"The doctor today lanced my incision. It was a lot of fun! Just wait until I get a few comforting letters from you, from the man who is fulfilling his promise to love, honor and cherish me, and I'll get up and whip the cockeyed world.

"Don't you know, David, as long as we stand for each other all will end happily?"

And then, as if in a pensive mood, she added and underlined:

"I stupidly bring most of my troubles on myself."

The next day she turned her attention to the brewing storm at Angelus Temple and wrote:

"Oh, daddy, if only I could lie still in the sunlight out here with no disturbing thoughts of disgusting church wars. Please, daddy, settle the church mind and make them know how good and gentle and unselfish and consecrated to Christ's cross you are!

"How I wish they knew you as I do."

It was in the July 4 letter, written less than two weeks before David's cabled summons to come back to Los Angeles, that she grew poetic:

"Sorrow?" wrote the golden-haired evangelist, "Burdens? Misunderstandings? Tears, hours of unhappiness—sure we'll have them, and some more.

"Yes, much of our cross we will deserve!

"Meekly let us bear it and that which we are falsely accused, let neglect, or carelessness—that for which we are falsely accused let us bear most joyously for His sake, feeling like Simon of old, we bear a measure of His cross."

Reunion Possible

That a reconciliation was possible was intimated today by Hutton's business manager, Harry Brandon, following a plea from Mrs. Hutton for a reunion with her portly husband.

Mrs. Hutton cabled from the steamship City of Havre bound from France to America:

"David, precious husband, if you must do this thing, please, in God's name, wait until I am physically able to face it. Shock was terrible following operation. I need you, so postpone plans. Listen to nobody. Oh, dearest, come and get me. Your wife."

Brandon, speaking for Hutton, declared:

"We are not in a position to make any direct reply to Mrs. Hutton. The case is in California courts. Her conduct after she arrives here may change our attitude, but our actions cannot be altered until she gets here."

Hutton reiterated that he would be unable to go East to meet his wife as he is busy preparing to embark upon a stage career.

LUER KIDNAPER FACES DEATH PENALTY

U. S. May Shift Trial of "Dice Box Kid" to State Court

BULLETIN

St. Louis, July 19 (AP)—Department of Justice Agents today arrested Frank Douglass, 41, a second suspect, in the kidnaping of August Luer.

St. Louis, July 19 (AP)—Identified as one of the kidnapers of August Luer, aged and wealthy banker of Alton, Ill., Percy M. Fitzgerald, today was under a federal charge of violation of the national extortion act.

The complaint against "the Dice-Box Kid," as Fitzgerald is known in the underworld, was filed last night with United States Commissioner Arthur R. Felsen in East St. Louis, after identification had been made by Mrs. Luer.

The banker's wife was at home in Alton a week ago Monday night when Luer, 77-year-old semi-invalid, was seized by two men and a woman. He was released by his captors early Sunday near Collinsville, Ill. No ransom was paid, members of his family said, although as much as $100,000 was demanded.

It was probable that instead of prosecuting Fitzgerald in federal courts under the Cochran law providing a maximum of five years in prison and $20,000 fine for using the manis to defraud, the department of justice would elect to transfer the case to the state courts under Illinois law which makes kidnaping a capital offense.

O'Connell Kidnap Hunt Turns to N. E. Coast

Albany, N. Y., July 19—District Attorney John T. Delaney may call the United States coast guard into the search for the kidnaped John J. O'Connell, Jr., because of the belief that he may be held on a boat in the Hudson or St. Lawrence or off the New England coast.

Thomas F. Cullen, chief agent of the department of justice in the east agreed to give complete co-operation.

It was believed that the young national guard lieutenant, nephew of Democratic dictators, would be released within 36 hours. O'Connell has been held 12 days for a ransom of $250,000.

Commenting upon Delaney's proposal to enlist the coast guard in the search for the kidnapers, Cullen declared "If the district attorney believes the guardsmen can help the investigation we'll co-operate."

ELY WARNING TO PROFITEERS

Warning that profiteering is inevitable as food prices begin to rise, Gov. Ely today sent a special message to the Legislature, demanding that it give him almost war-time powers to curb this evil.

Specifically, the Governor requested the enactment of a law that would permit him to appoint a food administrator at any time he believed an emergency to exist that required such drastic control.

He pointed out that no state agency today exists that has the power to curb profiteering in the necessities of life, such as may be expected when prices begin to climb.

To safeguard the people of the state, he wants the right to appoint a dictator who can control food prices

PAY RAISE FOR 3000 IN MILL

Pawtucket, R. I., July 19 (AP)— Good and bad news mingled in the Pawtucket-Central Falls textile area today.

Superintendent George Eberhardt of the Waypoyset Manufacturing Co., manufacturers of silk rayon, announced a "substantial" wage increase for 3000 employes.

At the Royal Weaving Co., a silk mill, Joseph Ott, the general manager, denied charges of Francis J. Gorman, national vice-president of the National Textile Workers of America, that the plant was paying wages lower than those provided by the cotton code.

'Tom' Walsh Gang Victim, Canon Chase Claims

Washington, July 19 (INS)— Voicing a suspicion that the late Sen. Thomas J. Walsh was murdered to keep him from becoming a crusading attorney general, Canon William Sheafe Chase, Episcopal leader, today proposed the creation of a new dry, anti-vice third party for the 1936 presidential elections.

Canon Chase offered the third party idea as a dry response to the overwhelming drive for repeal of the Eighteenth amendment. He rejected a suggestion that former President Herbert Hoover should lead the new party and recommended Sen. Arthur Robinson (R) of Indiana for that honor.

The noted clergyman expressed a "suspicion" that the late Senator Walsh was murdered to block his plans for prosecuting crooked financiers. He said Walsh had expressed an intent to jail "about 20 financiers" just a few days before his death.

"I suspected Senator Walsh was murdered," he said. "My suspicions were so strong I wrote to a person in high authority, asking for a post mortem examination of his body. My request was ignored.

"I know that some days before he died, Senator Walsh said he would put about 20 financiers in jail. He was feared by crooked politicians and crooked financiers. In these days, you can have a man killed for a few dollars— anywhere from $25 to $2500."

The late Senator Walsh died on a railroad train, en route with his bride of a week from Florida to Washington, just a few days before the inauguration of President Roosevelt. He had accepted appointment as attorney-general. Physicians attributed his death to heart failure.

LANGONE 4TH IN MAYOR'S RACE

State Senator Joseph A. Langone, Jr., notified the election commissioners today that he is a candidate for mayor of Boston.

He applied for norination papers and was informed that papers will be distributed to all the candidates on Sept. 5.

Langone in the Legislature represents the second Suffolk district —East Boston, Charlestown, West End and part of the South End.

Others already in the field for mayor at the election this fall are former Cong. Joseph F. O'Connell, former Dist. Atty. Thomas C. O'Brien, and ex-Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols.

Police Must Fear Girls at Marbles

It's not gangsters that policemen must fear, but little girls.

At least, Patrolman Elmer R. Crawford, attached to Station 15 in Charlestown, feels that way today.

He was walking along his Polk st. beat when a six-year-old girl kicked a marble. It bounded and hit the left lens of his eye-glasses, shattering it.

At the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary, Dr. F. Washburn removed a piece of glass from Crawford's eye.

DEATH CLUE IN DICTIONARY

From two names written on the fly, af of a pocket dictionary, police today were seeking to establish the identity of a man found unconscious on Boston Common. He died a few minutes after being admitted to Haymarket Relief Hospital.

The inscription in the dictionary, found in his pocket, reads:

"Luke Sullivan, May McDonald, 480 East ave., Lewiston, Me."

The body, after being removed to Northern Mortuary for an autopsy, was described as that of a man 50 to 55 years old, 5 feet, 9 inches high, weighing 140 pounds, with light hair and complexion, blue eyes and a smoothly shaven face.

The dead man wore a blue striped coat and vest, and gray trousers with a blue stripe.

Hutton Holds Fort at Aimee's Home

Los Angeles, July 19 (AP)— David L. Hutton's divorce action today developed into a squabble over occupancy of the parsonage at Angelus Temple, the evangelistic edifice of Aimee Semple McPherson-Hutton.

Open hostilities were initiated by the husband of the evangelist when he ordered a temple guard to barricade himself in the parsonage and defy any and all members of the congregation or its leaders to enter.

WIDOW PAINTED BY STATE WITNESSES AS 'GOOD MOTHER'

COSTELLO APPARENTLY HAPPY WITH WIFE, AND HEALTHY

know it or not but Bill has been acting funny of late."

He denied he said to her:

"Well, lately Bill hasn't looked very good to me."

There was some mention by Jessie of the black and blue marks.

Charles F. Burns, Peabody fire department electrician and a friend of the victim for 20 years, was the day's third witness.

Sketching chronologically the sequence of events leading up to Costello's death, Cregg called a series of witnesses whose testimony, word by word as a brick wall is built, lays the foundation of the anti-climax which Edward J. McMahon will provide in his detailed confession of his love for Jessie. Perhaps by tomorrow, Cregg said, McMahon will be called.

Costello Didn't Tell About Pay as Veteran

Brawley, the Peabody high school teacher and friend of Costello, was recalled to the stand by Asst. Dist. Atty. Green when court opened. Green immediately turned the witness over to Defense Counsel Rafter for cross-examination.

Brawley testified that he had known Mrs. Costello for 10 years and knew her well enough to call her Jessie.

Q—You have always been friendly with her? A—Yes, sir.

Q—You have no ill feeling or ill will toward Mrs. Costello now? A—No, sir.

Q—You have seen her and her three children in Peabody? A—Yes, sir.

Q—From your observations was she devoted to those children? A—As far as I could see, yes, sir.

Rafter then questioned Brawley about the wake which Capt. Costello and he attended the night before Costello died.

Q—There was considerable merriment there? A—No, sir.

Q—You stated that you acted as master of ceremonies. A—I did, but I meant that I took care of the seating arrangements.

Q—Bill Costello wasn't the type who would laugh, was he? A—I couldn't answer that.

Q—He was rather sober minded and took his responsibilities seriously, didn't he? A—Yes, sir.

Q—Bill Costello wasn't the only one who laughed that night, was he? A—No, sir.

Q—And the cause of the laughter was a remark? A—Yes.

Q—Who made it? A—I don't remember.

Q.—He looked pretty good to you that night? A—He did.

Q.—Did you know at that time that he was receiving 25 per cent disability from the Veterans' Bureau? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you know he had been to the doctor within three months? A.—No, sir.

Q.—He discussed few of her personal problems with you? A.—That's right.

Q.—You were paying compliments to each other at the wake, and that's what caused the laughter? A.—Yes.

"Bill Seemed Happy With This Woman"

Q.—You were talking baseball and when someone said to Bill, "You're no Babe Ruth," you all laughed? A.—Something like that, but not in those words.

Q.—Did Bill Costello laugh when he left the house? A.—No, sir.

Q.—You set the time as about 2 o'clock. A.—Yes.

Q.—What did Costello say when he left? A.—He said, "I'll see you in the morning."

Q.—From your observances, as an intimate friend of both of them Bill Costello was reasonably happy with this woman? A.—As far as I could see.

Brawley was then questioned by Asst. Dist.-Atty. Green in re-direct examination.

Q—In the last three years how many times have you seen Mrs. Costello on the street with her children? A—A number of times. I have also seen her at the fire station where Bill was stationed.

Q—Did you notice if she was devoted to her children? A—She had the children with her in the car. I have seen her out on shopping trips and they would be with her. I inferred she was devoted to them.

Q—About the laughter and mirth that has been talked about. What part of the house was that? A—The kitchen.

Q—Where was the body of John O'Neil? A—In the front room.

Green finished his questioning and Brawley was put under a re-cross-examination by Rafter.

Q—Why, you played Santa Claus to her children last Christmas, didn't you?

Green objected to the question.

"I presume you mean dressed in the regalia and all that?" said Judge Fosdick looking at Rafter. Rafter said he did.

"You may have your answer," said the court.

Q—A year or so ago you played Santa Claus and presented gifts to the children?

A—To all the children.

Q—You know that Mrs. Costello went to the firehouse when Bill was on duty? A—I wouldn't say that. She came every time I was at the station and especially at meal time.

Costello Led Wake Friends In Rosary

John D. O'Neil was next called by the state. In direct examination by Dist. Atty. Green, he said he now lives in Melrose, but lived at Highland Park, Peabody, when Costello died.

He said his father died on February 14 and that Bill Costello paid him a visit the next forenoon. He also came the next day and remained until 5 p. m. Costello went home and returned to the O'Neil house about 9 o'clock.

"O'Neil said he requested Costello to lead in saying the rosary at the wake and the prayer was started at midnight. There were 12 or 15 present then, he said.

According to O'Neil Costello left that house at 2:15 a. m.

Q—"Did you talk with him as he left?"

A—"I just asked him—"

"Just a moment," cried Rafter, "I object."

"Please answer yes or no," instructed the judge.

Green then asked O'Neil if he had talked with Costello just before he left the house. O'Neil said he had.

Q—"What did he say?"

Atty. Rafter objected.

"The witness may answer," ruled the court.

A—"He said, 'I'll see you in the morning'."

O'Neil testified that while the autos were filling the next morning for the funeral, a telephone call was received by Mrs. William Barrett at the O'Neil home. He said he had asked Costello to be a bearer at the funeral.

Anna Marie Used to Call O'Neil 'Tip'

Under cross-examination by Rafter, O'Neil said that he knew Mrs. Costello well enough to call her Jessie.

Q.—Have you any bitterness toward her now? A.—No, sir.

Q.—You knew her to be devoted to her children? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—You knew Anna Marie? She calls you "Tip," doesn't she? A.—She did, but she doesn't lately.

Q.—You refused to talk with Mr. O'Brine about this case, didn't you? A.—I told him I would tell my story up there. ("Up there" meant the Superior Court.)

Q.—Bill Costello came to your house to console you in your bereavement? A.—That's right. He was there all day Wednesday.

Q.—He talked with you about how happy your father must be? He must be happier than we are, he said that, didn't he? A.—Words to that effect to console me.

Q.—He said to you probably we would all be better off if we were in his place, or words to that effect? A.—That I don't remember.

Q.—You knew Mr. and Mrs. Costello pretty well. They got along pretty well, didn't they? A.—OK.

Q.—You didn't see Bill Costello laughing at your father's wake, did you? A.—I wasn't in any mood to think about that.

At this point Rafter asked that Mrs. William J. Barry of Melrose, O'Neil's second cousin, be summoned as a witness. Mrs. Barry received the telephone call at the O'Neil home from Mrs. Costello when Jessie called to tell O'Neil her husband could not be a pall bearer.

"Bill Looked Tired at Friend's Wake"

Charles F. Burns of 32 Tremont st., Peabody, electrician in the Peabody fire department, was the next witness.

He attended the O'Neil wake and testified that he had known Capt. Costello for many years.

Q.—What conversation did you have with Bill Costello that night. A.—A asked him if he was tired. He said he wasn't. When he left he told me he was going home to get some sleep because he was going to be a pall bearer.

Burns was cross-examined by Rafter.

Q.—You have been friendly with Mrs. Costello for many years? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—You were friendly with her before she married Bill and you are friendly with her at the present minute? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—She called you by your nickname, Chuck, and you called her Jessie? A—Yes.

Q—You saw her about the city many times with her children? A—Yes, sir.

Q—From your observations did she appear kindly and devoted to them? A—Yes, sir.

Q—And she was kindly and devoted to Bill Costello, too, wasn't she? A—Yes, sir.

Q—You asked Bill if he was tired that night at the O'Neil wake? A.—Yes.

Q.—That question was suggested by his appearance, wasn't it? A.—Yes, he looked tired.

Burns said Costello would laugh like any normal man, although he was rather retiring and serious. He was at the wake when the rosary was recited, he said, and there was no laughter at this time. It was a solemn rite, he testified, and following the recitation, the group went to the kitchen and had lunch.

Q.—Have you visted the Costello home in recent years and had an opportunity to observe the family life there? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—From what you observed, would you say that as far as it is humanly possible for people to get along, they got along? A.—Yes, sir.

Burns said he was not aware of any physical change in Bill Costello in the last 10 years, except a slight change by the process of time. Rafter showed him a picture of Mr. and Mrs. Costello, taken three weeks before the death of Costello, and asked him if there was any change in the man during the years. Burns again said just the change made by time.

Rafter offered the picture as an exhibit, but after a conference at the bench, the photo was withdrawn.

Costello Got His Government Pension

The witness said Costello never complained to him of stomach trouble or other ailments, even though they tried together to obtain pensions from the government some nine or ten months ago. Costello was successful in getting aid, he said, but he was refused.

Atty. Gren examined the witness briefly in re-direct.

Q—Did you see Bill Costello with the children at times? A—Yes, sir.

Q—Did you see him with them more or less than you saw Mrs. Costello with them? A—I saw her more times.

Patrolman David W. Ahearne of the Peabody police department was the next witness.

He testified he had known Bill Costello practically all his life and met him on an average of once a week, although he did not have much talk with him.

He finished his police work at about 1:45 o'clock on te morning of February 17, he said, and went to the O'Neil home, which was on his beat.

Ahearn testified he saw Costello at the wake and conversed with him. Rafter objected to admission of the conversation, but it was admitted. Assistant District Attorney Green questioned.

Q.—How did Costello act? A.—He had a slight grin on his face.

Q.—Did he look any different that night than you have ever seen him? A.—No.

Under cross examination by Rafter, Ahearn said he had known Costello since boyhood. He testified that he met Mrs. Costello about six years ago and knew her well enough to call her Jessie.

Q.—You saw Mrs. Costello driving the children around Peabody in Bill's car? She was devoted to them? A.—Yes, sir.

Wife Appeared To Be Devoted To Bill, Too

Q.—That applies to Mrs. Costello's attitude toward Mr. Costello? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—You have been to their home and from your observations it was a happy household? A.—Yes, sir

Ahearn was taken in re-direct examination by Green.

Q.What, if anything, did you see her do for the children that makes you think she was devoted to them? A.—It looked as though she took good care of them all the time.

Q.—Did she do anything different than any mother would do? A.—Not that I saw.

Q.—You saw the children with Bill, what was his attitude toward them? A.eH loved the children, too.

Mrs Katherine Simbolist of Essex st., Peabody, a once-a-week maid, was the next witness. She was the first woman called to the stand. Mrs. Simbolist said she met Mr. and Mrs. Costello in March, 1932, when she went to work there.

She testified that she went to the home usually on Fridays to clean. She said she was there the morning Capt. Costello was found dead.

Q.—By Green: What time did you arrive? A.—About 8.15

Q—Who was there? A.—Just Mrs. Costello and the baby.

Q—Did you have any talk with Mrs. Costello about what part of the house you were to clean first? A—Yes, Mrs. Costello told me to do as I usually do—clean downstairs first and then go up stairs.

Then Mrs. Simbolist said she cleaned the bedroom off the kitchen and then when she came into the kitchen Mrs. Costello handed her "the stuff."

Throughout her testimony Mrs. Simbolist referred to the composition of oxalic acid and cyanide of potassium as "the stuff."

Q.—What did Mrs. Costello say? A.—She gave me "the stuff" and told me that I was to clean the boiler with it.

Q.—What was the stuff in? A.—It was in a coffee tin. There was a spoon in it and Mrs. Costello put it on the gas stove.

Q.—Did Mrs. Costello say anything else? A.—Yes, she said her husband mixed the stuff for her. I said to Mrs. Costelo. I never use this stuff. Mrs. Costello said it was good and said that Mrs. Hoffman told her about it.

Q.—After she said her husband mixed it what did she say, A.—Mrs. Costello told me to do the boiler. She showed me how to do it. She put a rubber glove on her left hand, got a cloth, and started to clean the boiler. The stuff made my eyes water. I said "It's awful strong." Mrs. Costello said "Yes" and opened the windows.

WearsHerSmile in Picture With 'Bill'

Salem, July 19—Battling with Government witnessest to have Mrs. Jessie B. Costello held up in favorable light as a devoted wife and mother, Atty. Francis E. Rafter, of her defense counsel, produced in court today a photograph of Mrs. Costello and the husband she is charged with slaying.

The photograph, declared by Rafter to have been taken three weeks before Fire Capt. William J. Costello is alleged to have been poisoned, showed the accused widow standing beside her husband and smiling in happiness.

In the picture she wore the badge of a good housewife's domesticity, an apron.

The photograph failed of admission as an exhibit.

RUNNING THE LANE OF CURIOUS EYES

The same skipping alacrity of her previous appearances marked Mrs. Costello's progress through the lanes of sight-seers massed outside Salem courthouse today. Note the broad smile playing around the widow's face. It was contagious. Important in today's testimony was the word of a maid who declared that "Bill," the late Peabody fire captain, "always mixed the liquid for cleaning the household utensils." Boston American photo.

WIDOW'S MOODS MATCH WIT OF PROSECUTOR CREGG

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

with a vitality that is real and clutching.

JESSIE A MATCH FOR ALL

And there she sits in the courtroom, in the aisle between the prosecution and the jury box—between the devil and the deep blue sea—as it were.

But Jessie is a match for it all. If it is her funeral, as the government battles that it might be in retaliation for the death of her fire captain husband, "Bill," Jessie will dictate the procession. If it is to be her life, again Jessie will write out her own pursuit of happiness.

Life and death, the two extremes of being, the two extremes of Jessie's future, and Jessie still carries on the two extremes of her own emotions.

One day a "smiling widow" unmoved by court procedure, unsaddened by tragedy. Another day a fighting, angered, bitter woman at odds with a government witness.

Five months in jail climaxed by her "day in court" has taken away none of the spirit of this accused murderess. There is a quickness to her eye and an even greater quickness to her step.

At the close of court yesterday Jessie sprung up from her "choice" courtroom seat and started hurriedly for the detention room.

HELD BACK BY MATRON

Momentarily she forgot the dignity of a Massachusetts court. Momentarily she forgot that God has to save the Commonwealth of Massachusetts before the day was over and she could return with counsel and friends to the Salem jail to review the five hours of testimony the state offered to judge and jury.

Jail Matron Mrs. Rachael Craig took hold of Jessie's arm before she got too far away from her and held Jessie back. Jessie smiled. She almost laughed out loud at the move she had made.

But she didn't face the judge or the jury. To the 12 good men and true she turned her back, not deliberately, however. Sideways she faced her counsel while the court officer in resonant voice closed court.

With not a word of adieu to counsel she turned and hurried out of the court room, stopping for a fleeting moment to shake the hand of a friend sitting in the spectators' benches.

RING STILL MISSING

And then Jessie was gone, gone for the day to return on the morrow, on many morrows until she stood convicted or vindicated of the charge of murder.

Somewhere in Jessie's makeup there is a tinge of humor.

The railing separating her and her counsel served as a lean for Jessie's arm on which she rested her body most of the day. Bending over to counsel she whispered,

"I'm glad they sat me here. I've got something to lean on beside you."

The one unfathomable absence in Jessie's wardrobe is her missing wedding ring.

The accused widow appeared at the second day of her trial without it, and her counsel said she would appear without it for the remaining days of her ordeal.

Why? There is no answer to that either from Jessie or her counsel. She may have lost it or it may be a peculiar whim of hers. At any rate Jessie appears without it.

It adds one more interest to Jessie's already provocative personality, branded "frivolous" and flamboyant by a stormy prosecutor in contrast to the state's sober characterization of her God-fearing husband.

And as District Attorney Hugh A. Cregg held Jessie up to public shame as a "frivolous gal" and "the kind of a girl that men forget," stigmatizing her as a woman "vulgar and profane," the widow remained impervious to the lashing. The prosecutor had his job to fulfill but she still had her story to tell.

But to the crowds Jessie was likewise impervious. Let them gape at her like a circus side show exhibit. Let them yell "whoopee" at her as she went to and from the courthouse. Jessie had still her day to come and her story to tell. Jessie had temperament but like every well trained actress she isn't dissipating it until the proper time.

Dempsey's Wife Ends Her Stage Life

Cal-Neva, July 19 (AP)—Hannah Williams, bride of Jack Dempsey, said today she would leave the stage.

"I am all through with the stage," said the 22-year-old Broadway musical comedy star. "I'm going to concentrate on being a good wife to Jack."

The 38-year-old former heavyweight boxing champion and the pretty blonde actress were married at Elko, Nevada, yesterday. It was the third marital venture for each.

Dempsey said he and his wife would remain here several days before going on to San Francisco and Los Angeles.

At the Sign of the Red
----I meet a Youthful Budgeteer
You know there's a great deal of satisfaction in knowing you are giving anyone a lot for their money. I really think there's more pleasure in so doing than making a huge profit . . . perhaps it doesn't have such a salutary effect on the bank balance, but it certainly does make a fellow feel good down where he lives.
● Several times each week I am given a total of the number of meals we have served during the preceding interval. The number of thousands it amounts up to would astound you . . . it often does me, and when I think of these vast number of people who have left our doors completely satisfied with a bounteous meal of fine, nourishing food at such a moderate price, I begin to believe this job of mine is a pretty good one after all.
● I like to think anything I can do contributes to people's happiness and well being.
● A youngster, along about seventeen, brought this to my mind the other Saturday evening. His boyish enthusiasm sort of opened up new paths of service every Waldorf maintains in its community . . . for not only was he enthusiastic but truly grateful for what our Good Eating Places meant in his young life.
● It seems he had been just about six months at his first job. His pay was small, naturally. Even in these times of low prices he was hard put to make both ends meet. I even suspect just previous to pay day this lad scraped along on next to nothing. "They are paying me twelve a week," he explained, "three goes for my room, I put away two for clothes, extras take about a dollar and a half, which leaves five and a half to eat with. Not so much for my appetite, but by careful management and the Waldorf I am doing fine."
● I noted his plate, so to see how he checked up. Sure enough . . . our Saturday night Baked Bean Special! Plenty of good hearty food there.
● That boy will be grateful to Waldorf all his days!

ARKANSAS AND ALABAMA IN REPEAL FOLD

Birmingham, Ala., July 19 (AP)—Traditionally dry Alabama today had joined the ranks of states voting to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment, although late returns from rural districts was whittling down the early long lead piled up in favor of ratification of the Twenty First Amendment.

The count at 10:15 a. m., central standard time, from 1268 of the 2137 ballot boxes in the state showed 78,356 votes for repeal and 56,693 against in yesterday's referendum.

Charles E. Rice, chairman of the forces opposing repeal in Alabama, conceded defeat, but pointed out that the state dry laws still are in effect and said the prohibition forces would oppose any movement to change them.

In conceding victory to the repealists Rice said, "My judgment is that later returns will increase our vote in proportion to the repeal vote but the additional ballots in any event won't be enough for us to win."

The state voted to elect 116 delegates to a repeal convention to be held August 8. Delegates are bound to vote as a unit on the basis of the referendum.

Arkansas Goes Wet by Ratio of 3 to 2

Little Rock, Ark., July 19 (AP)—A ratio of 3 to 2 for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment was maintained today as additional returns were received from yesterday's referendum.

With 1183 precincts heard from out of 2046, in the state, the vote was:

For repeal—56,501.

Against repeal—36,375.

Bearing out predictions, the 10 most populous counties in which are situated the larger towns and cities, gave practically a 5 to 2 majority for repeal.

The 10 counties furnished approximately 41 per cent of the vote already tabulated. Of this 71 per cent was wet.

Phillips County voted 89 per cent wet to lead the procession.

M. L. Sigman, president of the New Deal Repeal Club, telegraphed President Roosevelt he "was very happy in presenting to you this great state for ratification of the Twenty-first (repeal) Amendment."

Commenting on the returns, the Rev. Arden P. Blalock, Baptist minister here and one of the state prohibition leaders, said:

"With the going of Alabama and Arkansas for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, it is practically assured, but it will serve as a boomerang on our Democratic party."

Repeal Sure This Year Says Shouse

New York, July 19 (AP)—Repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment before the end of 1933 was held today to be certain by Jouett Shouse, president of the National Association Against Prohibition.

"The verdict of the American people is just as certain, is just as well known and is just as commanding now as it will be when the last detail has been completed," Shouse said, commenting on the votes yesterday in Arkansas and Alabama.

"It is now highly probable that not merely the necessary 36 states will ratify the pending proposed Twenty-first Amendment to the federal Constitution but that it will be ratified by all the 48 states of the Union.

Jap's Arrest Ends Big Coast Dope Ring

San Francisco, July 19 (INS)—The arrest in Osaka, Japan, of Tatsu Kawahara broke up one of the world's largest narcotic smuggling rings, which brought morphine valued at $20,000,000 to Pacific coast cities from the Orient in the past six years, Federal narcotics officials said here today.

Kawahara organized the ring in Los Angeles and returned to Japan to supervise the source of supply, the officials declared.

Gold Bridge, 4 to 1, Wins Molyneu Cup

Livrpool, England, July 19 (AP)—A. K. Macomber's Gold Bridge, at 4 to 1, today won the Molyneu Cup race, a five-furlong dash, valued at £1000 sterling. J. B. Noel's Rosemary's Pet finished second, a length back. Twelve ran.

Those Rollicking Elks Play Trick on Farley in Shoot

Milwaukee, Wis., July 19 (AP)—Those rollicking Elks—they're in the midst of convention festivities here—induced Postmaster General James A. Farley to try his hand at trap-shooting, and played a trick on him.

With a modest remark that he would break the record for misses, that baseball was his game, Farley selected a shotgun and called "pull." The target soared out and the gun blazed.

The target soared on.

Time and again that happened and "Genial Jim" was ready to give up in disgust.

"Just one more round," a brother Elk coaxed, winking at an expert marksman, who took a position behind Farley.

Another target flew out. Farley fired. So did the expert—simultaneously. The clay disc was shattered. Another target, another hit. And a third.

"Well, I broke three anyway," Farley exulted, as he strode off.

"Let's Look at the Records"

OPEN LETTER TO ATTORNEY GENERAL JOSEPH E. WARNER:

As chief of the State's legal department and advisor to the forthcoming legislative investigation of crime and the police department of Boston you will doubtless require in your work the records of the real racket kings of Boston.

Governor Ely was not successful in getting from the police department the names of the real leaders of the underworld. The list he got was composed mostly of small fry and petty offenders.

To help you in your investigation the Boston Evening American will present for your study each day the record of a man whose name stands high up in the list of public enemies and whose name has been withheld from the governor by the police department.

The record of each of these men is available at police headquarters.

NUMBER 2

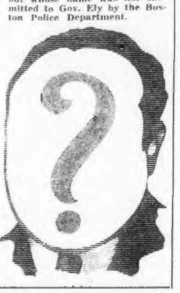
Today's subject has appeared in Massachusetts courts 32 times during a criminal career which began back in 1916. The charges included almost everything from larceny, breaking and entering, and carrying a gun to assault with intent to kill, assault with a dangerous weapon and other serious crimes too numerous to mention. Of his 32 bows before the bench all but three have been in Suffolk County Courts. Only once did he receive a jail sentence. That was given in Norfolk County Superior Court in 1928 on a charge of assault. He served three months in the House of Correction on that charge—the only time he has ever served in jail. True, he has paid numerous fines, the highest, $25 for speeding.

ATTY.-GEN. JOS. E. WARNER

His record is dotted with nol prosses, suspended sentences and probations. The last time he appeared in Suffolk Superior Court he was found not guilty of assault and battery. Lower courts have found him guilty on many counts, but his appeals have always resulted in his "beating the rap."

Several times in the past four years he has been the target of rival gangsters' guns. Some of the bullets struck him and some struck bystanders. At the present moment he is engaged in several illegal enterprises, but his chief source of revenue is from illegal sale of liquor.

Tomorrow the Boston Evening American will publish the record of another man who ranks high in the list of public enemies, but whose name was not submitted to Gov. Ely by the Boston Police Department.



Foley Stands by Grand Jury Report Lashing Police

Dist. Atty. William J. Foley, commenting today on testimony by himself and others before the legislative judiciary committee, said that he stood by the grand jury's criticism of the police and that Deputy Supt. Anderson and Lieut. Stephen J. Gillis did not dispute the grand jury's findings.

Anderson, who with Gillis was hit hard by the grand jury report, suffering transfer from the detective bureau as a result, dramatically praised Foley at the close of the committee's hearing.

The committee met in executive session today to prepare its report on Gov. Ely's crime-prevention message in which the Governor asked a special commission of three with proper powers to investigate.

Turning to face Foley and Doyle, Deputy Anderson said:

"I want this committee to know that I have the highest regard for the district-attorney of Suffolk County and his first assistant.

APPROVES CRIME BOARD

"I have had the pleasure of sitting in with Mr. Doyle in the handling of cases and found that he always went through 100 per cent. I think a crime commission would be a good thing. The laws governing idle and disorderly cases and suspicious persons might be strengthened in order to enable the police to hold them longer.

"The Boston police department has done a wonderful job in the apprehension of gangsters. I have put on the steel vest and aided in the capture of desperate criminals. I agree with Dist.-Atty. Bishop, of Middlesex, that the only way is to hit them hard.

FOLEY BACKS ELY PLAN

Dist.-Atty. Foley made so many constructive suggestions to the committee that the members took copious notes. Foley said the crime commission suggested by the governor was an excellent plan. He said bonding companies should be subject to the same strict requirements that personal bondsmen are.

He said foreign security companies go bonds for racketeers and outlaws without being amenable to anyone. He told of one company going bail to the extent of $18,000 for criminals in Suffolk county and then going into bankruptcy leaving the county holding the bag.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Doyle sought the co-ordination of all law agencies, the police, county prosecutors, the courts and probation bureaus.

Doyle said Suffolk county with an annual docket of from 7000 to 9000 cases was the "busiest county in the Commonwealth."

Rep. Hays went after Lester Banks, foreman of Suffolk grand jury, hammer and tongs. He got Banks to admit that it was because of a statement made by Deputy Supt. Anderson in a radio speech that the grand jury had failed to act in the case of a criminal, that the grand jury started its special crime probe.

As the committee went into executive session today it seemed more doubtful than on the previous day that they would report in favor of bestowing the power of inquiry to Atty.-Gen. Warner as state crime dictator, but seemed more likely to support Gov. Ely's plan for a crime commission to thresh out the entire situation and stamp out rackets, racketeers and killers.

U. S. Bridge Team in Slump to Britons

London, July 19 (AP) — After whittling England's lead to 660 points today, the American contract bridge team slumped and tea-time found the Britons ahead with the largest margin yet, 3370 points.

At that time 110 games had been played. The Americans found the 13th in today's session particularly unlucky, dropping 1150 points.

MORE COINS OF SILVER VOTED

London, July 19 (AP)—The increased use of silver in subsidiary coinage was agreed upon by the World Economic Conference subcommittee on silver today in adopting a part of Senator Key Pittman's resolution.

Other important features of the American silver program were held over for future action. A proposal to regulate the world output of the metal will await decisions by a conference of producers and exporters.

A third important feature of the Pittman plan regarding the use of silver as a part of central banks metal coverage also failed to produce definite results, as the subcommittee recommended that action be delayed pending further discussions.

This limited action on Senator Pittman's resolution to something far short of its original expectations when the Nevadan introduced it several weeks ago.

Senator Pittman told the Associated Press he was quite satisfied with the result.

REPEAL VICTORY SEEN IN SOUTH

Washington, July 19 (INS)—The drive for repeal of national prohibition reached the half way mark today as the votes of Alabama and Arkansas rolled up a total of 18 states ratifying the repeal amendment to the Constitution.

The results in these two southern states were a distinct victory for the administration, since President Roosevelt made a personal appeal to the Democratic South to ratify the amendment. It marked the first time the solid South had broken away from the prohibition cause on a direct vote.

Repeal leaders were jubilant. They predicted a complete victory by Christmas, since the repealing amendment must be ratified by only 18 more states. Two more states vote this week, Tennessee on Thursday and Oregon on Friday. The repealists predicted victories in both states.

Dry leaders were silent. They declined to comment on the outcome.

HARRIMAN HELD BEHIND BARS

New York, July 19 (AP)—Bars confined Joseph W. Harriman today, while a judge considered whether to charge the former banker $25,000 for his latest journey to nowhere.

Harriman, awaiting trial on a charge of falsifying the accounts of the Harriman National Bank & Trust Co., turned up late yesterday after a second disappearance from a nursing home.

He appeared a few hours after Federal Judge Caffey had ordered his $25,000 bail forfeited. The judge committed him to a Bellevue Hospital ward, which has barred doors and windows, for mental observation.

After conferring almost an hour with counsel, Judge Caffey adjourned indefinitely motions before him on whether the sanity hearing should be continued during Harriman's absence in Bellevue Hospital.

The former banker hailed a taxi near the Hudson river yesterday. His clothes were dripping. Directing the driver to the nursing home, he said:

"Step on it. I just fell in the river."

NATIONAL WAGE CODE DRIVE SPEEDED

Washington, July 19 (AP)—Strategists of the Roosevelt recovery campaign sought common ground in conference today on setting up a blanket minimum wage and maximum work week standard for the entire country, with indications of an early announcement.

Preliminaries were hastened, through hearings in which spokesmen for the electrical and shipbuilding industries spoke for agreements reached to improve employment and compensation in those industries.

Secretary Roper presided at the meeting of the "Industrial Advisory Board," composed of various cabinet members and asistants.

NATIONAL CODE SCOPE

What extent to go on the proposed voluntary national code, which would be aimed to enhance purchasing power until such a time as many individual "codes" can be completed, was the question.

Electrical manufacturers testified application of their proposed code would restore the full 1929 employment level in the industry upon a return of only 60 per cent of that year's production. The new code proposed 35 cents an hour minimum wage and a 36-hour week in the agreement.

SHIP CODE REVISED

The shipbuilding people substituted a revision for their first code—a major change being, that all employes engaged in designing, engineering and other occupations preparatory to starting new work, such as the pending naval construction program, shall be exempt for six months from the forty-hour week proposed for the bulk of the employes.

The 40-hour week was changed to make it based on a six months period with provision that if any worker was employed more than eight hours in any one day he should receive time and a half for overtime. The minimum pay for labor was left unchanged at 35 cents in the South and 40 cents in the North.

Meanwhile, Hugh S. Johnson—administrator of the law—was considering extensive changes in the publicity machinery of his organization.

PUBLICITY UNIT

Expected soon was announcement that the entire unit would be put under direction of Charles F. Horner, who organized speaking campaigns for the war time Liberty Loan drive and has been framing plans for a similar campaign to stir public enthusiasm in support of the "blanket code" proposition.

Reports, not confirmed, were that Johnson was seeking the services of Charles Michaelson, who conducted publicity for the Democratic National Committee between 1928 and the last election. He is in London at the World Economic Conference.

Rum, Narcotic Cases Before Federal Jury

Rum, narcotics and a bank case engaged the attention of the grand jury at today's session in the federal building. No major bank cases, such as the affairs of the closed Federal National Bank, were on the docket.

The alleged defalcation of a small sum of money from the Leominster National Bank is being probed, it is understood.

Girl Shoots Self on Movie Failure

Hollywood, July 19 (INS)—Finding of the pajama-clad body of Marjorie Rose Williams, 20, a visitor from Leadville, Col., in an orange orchard led authorities today to declare she had shot and killed herself after a failure to break into the movies.

THE $50,000,000 FISHING INDUSTRY and What It Means to New England

Fish Pier . . . Boston. Through this important port of the Massachusetts Fisheries, millions of pounds of fish are packed and shipped to all parts of America. Millions of dollars come back to New England in exchange, increasing per capita wealth and affording livelihood to over a quarter of a million people.

"Bringing in the dory catch." Hand line and trawl fishing constitute one of the most hazardous branches of fishing. These hardy men undergo exposure to the weather and hardships to bring in their catches. They deserve ample reward for their labor.

THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT
STATE HOUSE BOSTON

THE GOVERNOR

June 23, 1933

Mr. J.J.Cremmen
Advertising Director
Boston American
Boston, Massachusetts

My dear Mr.Cremmen:

It has been brought to my attention that the Boston Evening American is planning to publish a page of important facts and statistics emphasizing the urgent need for protection and support of the New England fishing industry.

I am heartily in accord with any movement which will aid in promoting the interests of this great industry, and in guarding it from the type of foreign competition that works a disadvantage.

Stabilized and successful operation of the fishing industry brings direct, substantial benefits to New England, and Massachusetts in particular.

On this basis, such an effort merits the co-operation of affiliated industries and citizens in general.

Sincerely yours,

Joseph B. Ely

Fishing Industry Pays Annual Wages of Over $15,000,000

An industry which pays over $15,000,000 annually in wages; whose workers spend approximately $2,000,000 a year in food, and hundreds of thousands more for other necessities of life . . . these are the facts and figures on the fishing industry.

Few people realize that the various branches of commercial fishery operations represent a $50,000,000 industry. The magnitude of this business, and its tremendous importance to New England and Massachusetts, makes it imperative that the industry be given the necessary protection, as Governor Ely states, "from the type of foreign competition that works a disadvantage."

Theory would have us open our markets to every other country in exchange for the privilege of selling into the markets of the world. Often theory stops at that point and fails to see that our costs of manufacture are materially increased over those of other nations by the one thing that has made America the greatest country in the world; that is, a higher plane of living to everyone engaged in industry.

It is utterly impossible for any industry to pay its help higher wages unless that industry is assured of a market in which to sell its products at a higher price. The higher price does not of necessity penalize anyone, for sections of a country often depend for their prosperity on the conditions existing in some specific industry.

TARIFF BARRIERS NEEDED

The Fishing Industry of the North Atlantic is centered in New England, solely because of reasonable tariffs, which in most instances do not even make up the differences in cost of production between the United States and Canada. Yet they serve to erect a barrier so that our people, accustomed to better living conditions can continue to carry on and develop a Great Basic Industry, bringing millions of dollars into Massachusetts and New England. This money remains here to the last penny. It is spent over and over again in New England retail stores for necessities of life.

If tariff barriers meant that the people in the United States who in an industry benefited at the expense of the rest of the country, the system could not be defended. However, it is possible to demonstrate that such protection has been the only thing that has kept the industry alive at all and prevented its migrating to Canada.

DUTY SAVES MILLIONS

The duty on fillets is 2½c per lb. This protection saves a business for the United States that amounts to many millions of dollars. Saving this business enables 30 or 40 other industries to do a profitable business with the fisheries, where they sell their products to be used on boats and in factories in the fishing industry.

Since the per capita consumption of fish in the United States is less than 20 pounds per person per year, and the average duty on fish is about 1½c per lb., this enormous business is held in the United States at a cost in no instance greater than 30c per person per year. In other words, if we should agree that the price of fish was raised 1½c because of duties, that would be the amount of increase in the price of fish. Yet the actual fact is, that the retail price is not raised any appreciable amount. Protection serves only to keep our own laborers employed, receiving wages enabling them to buy products of many industries, creating prosperity for all.

REVENUE FROM INDUSTRY

Today the fishing industry faces the most serious threat of its history. This threat is a logical part of any reciprocity agreement with Canada and other nations. Canada has always desired free access to our markets with her fish, lumber, wheat, etc. She has always desired the enormous business that goes with the fisheries. Massachusetts alone sells the fishermen approximately $2,000,000 worth of food per year. As much more is spent for fuel for the boats. Wages are at least $15,000,000.

These millions and many more will follow the fishing fleet wherever it goes, and when Canada offers access to her ports for the landing of our fish there to be shipped or manufactured with Canadian labor, it simply means a transfer of an enormous business from New England into Canada.

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts concedes the importance of the industry by their investment in various properties. The taxes collected from the industry in all of its ramifications are enormous. The industry, from a national viewpoint, ranks high in the production of millions of pounds of health giving food, and certainly every citizen is benefited by the industry. It is therefore, most important that due recognition is given it and adequate protection afforded it.

The peculiarities of the Industry require that those who would legislate for it should understand it. Therefore, it seems impossible for one to grasp, without special study, even a small portion of the problems which arise, due to the intricacies of the business and the many varieties of its products.

Inimical legislation is often up for consideration. The old romance and hazards of fishing may hide the hard ethics of business which should be the determining factor in all legislation.

LEGISLATION IMPORTANT

The fishing industry, like all of the industries of New England, is dependent today more than ever on the result of legislation. We must become aware of the great changes that are taking place in the adjustment of capital and labor. New bills introduced would give unheard of power to a few people to dictate the policies of the industries of this country. Those who are in control have in their hands the destiny of industry, and thereby the destinies of all the citizens of the United States.

Sane, tried policies resulting from practical experience will, if endorsed, assure a new condition far better than the old. Unwise, untried theory can plunge our New England industries into such an orgy of experiments that we may well fear for our very existence.

In view of the conditions as they exist it seems essential that industry realize that legislation today is of prominent importance. Therefore, it is necessary to remember that your congressmen, senators and legislators in all branches of government are your servants and not your masters.

It is essential that you realize that these servants of yours should obey your instruction.

Today your congressmen and senators should receive instructions from you, on all of these matters pertaining to your business, so that their actions may perchance be the balance wheel which preserves this nation's equilibrium.

The fishing industry is no different from other industries, in that its success becomes a most important factor in the success of the nation.

Let us start our own factories by means of establishing our own markets. Let us provide labor for our own laborers. Let us prosper!

TO THE READERS OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN

The Great Fisheries of the North Atlantic are centered in Massachusetts. Each year more than 500,000,000 lbs. of Fish and Seafoods are transported from this Commonwealth to all parts of the Nation.

Each dollar that comes to this section of the country in payment for fish remains in New England to be spent over and over again for food, clothing and necessaries of life.

Every citizen is vitally interested in the success of this Industry for the simple reason that it brings new wealth, provides labor for many thousands, and serves to make living conditions better for all.

New England must rise or fall with her industries. The people of New England can prosper only as her industries prosper. The interest that we take in the success of our industries is directly measured by the assistance we render in the purchase of the products which these industries offer to us.

Self-preservation, therefore, dictates a policy of consumer cooperation. The Fisheries offer you Nature's Greatest Health Food, delightfully fresh from the crystal, cool waters of the North Atlantic, and assure you of their interest in New England's prosperity.

Very truly yours,

E. H. Cooley
Manager

ELY CALLS FOR PRISON INSANE HOSPITAL

Passage of legislation authorizing the building of a state hospital to house the criminal insane on state land adjacent to the prison colony at Norfolk, as a project under the recovery act, was recommended to the legislature today by Governor Ely.

The governor also asked for authority for the commissioner of correction, at such time as funds became available, to transfer this land to the commissioner of mental diseases.

The Governor explained that it is not his desire to advocate one state project in preference to another but that this legislation is necessary because the special commission which investigated and recommended the taking of the criminal insane from the State Farm at Bridgewater to a new institution, had in mind asking for the institution when a new building plan was promulgated. At that time there was nothing to indicate the present federal act.

He pointed out that the commission to be set up for selecting what state projects are to be undertaken could not consider this project unless it exists at least on paper prior to the application for funds for the building.

Gentle Breezes Drive Heat Wave

Old Sol let up on yesterday's attempt to toast Bostonians and they were able to go back to coats and collars today without wilting.

The temperature was 69 degrees this morning at 9 o'clock in comparison with yesterday's high of 90, within 6 degrees of an all-time record for the day, which was set way back in 1878. The low for today was reached at 4 a. m., when the pointer dropped to 65 degrees.

The weatherman's prediction of gentle shifting winds gave added promise of relief from the sweltering heat of yesterday. Tomorrow will not bring much change in temperature.

Morgan in England, Will Meet Bankers

Southampton, Eng., July 19 (AP)—J. P. Morgan, arriving here today from New York, said it was likely he would meet many British financiers on his trip here, including Montagu Norman, Governor of the Bank of England, and no political significance would be attached to any of his talks.

"But, he added, "I shall not rule out the possibility of talks on stabilization."

Mr. Morgan declined to comment on the recent inquiry upon his banking house at Washington. He said he intended to visit his offices at London and Paris before going to Scotland for the grouse shooting. He went from here to London.

800 ON OUTING FROM ROXBURY

Roxbury declared a holiday today when more than 800 of the business men, their wives and children, sailed on the Nantasket steamer Allerton for Bourne, where they planned to forget their business worries and joys in a day of fun.

Even the courthouse at Roxbury recessed for the day as Judge Frankland L. Miles doffed his legal robes and joined the throng. At Bourne it was planned to draft him to act as judge again, but this time in a potato race between children of the fun-making merchants.

The outing, which is an annual affair, sponsored by the Roxbury Board of Trade, brought business in Roxbury to a complete standstill, as almost every storekeeper had agreed to close shop for the day. Festive banners floated from the buses as they left Eliot sq. for the steamer wharf.

At Bourne the committee in charge, headed by Dr. Leon B. Ballicer, planned a series of contests, to be followed by a shore dinner, amended to include "hot dogs."

R. I. MAN HELD IN DEATH CASE

Detroit, July 19 (AP)—Authorities were holding John F. Foran, 42, today on technical charges growing out of an operation alleged to have been performed upon Mrs. Helen Geiger, 29, who died today. Assistant Prosecutor I. A. Capizzi said Foran will be charged with manslaughter.

Police said that Foran who also was known as John H. Lee, had been sentenced twice in Rhode Island for illegal surgery, and was a fugitive from a third conviction. Foran told police he graduated from the Harvard Medical School in 1914.

Foran, police said, is wanted in Rhode Island for jumping a $25,000 bond in a manslaughter conviction returned May 3, 1932, and a $3000 bond for manslaughter in an auto accident.

Police believe him to be the "Dr. Lee," of Pawtuckett, R. I., who was convicted of illegal surgery in 1923 and again in 1932, and at present is a fugitive, having jumped a $25,000 bond.

He never attended Harvard, either as Foran or as Lee, according to the school. Nor is he listed in the directory of the American Medical Association.

Balbo Air Armada Speeds to New York Welcome

Chicago, July 19—Italy's Atlantic squadron of 24 silver seaplanes, commanded by Gen. Italo Balbo hopped off from Chicago harbor, in Lake Michigan at 8:45 a. m. (E.D.T.), today for New York, first stop on the return to Orbetello.

The armada took off in groups of three planes, Gen. Balbo's own being first to get away. The others skimmed across the harbor and followed him upward in rapid succession. The weather was calm and clear.

After circling low over the "loop," Balbo left behind him the Century of Progress and hundreds of cheering spectators, nosing his flagship southeast along the shore of Lake Michigan.

AIRWAYS ROUTE

Just before taking off, Gen. Balbo announced he would follow the American Airways route east to a great extent, weather permitting.

This route will take him over Cleveland, O.; Erie, Pa.; Albany, N. Y., and down the Hudson to New York city.

Prior to his departure General Balbo announced that if weather conditions are favorable he would undertake a transatlantic journey more ambitious than the east to west crossing. The proposed route would be via Newfoundland to Ireland and would keep the fliers over water a little less than 2000 miles.

Within seven hours they expected to be in New York where they plan to remain for three or four days. Meanwhile General Balbo and his 24 officers will fly by American planes to Washington where they will be greeted by President Roosevelt.

CHEERED BY THOUSANDS

Their take off from Chicago marked the close of a three and a half day visit to this mid-west metropolis and its Century of Progress exposition, during which they were given cordial receptions by officials and many thousands of Chicagoans and visitors to the World's Fair.

As the Italian seaplanes appear over upper New York, they will be met by the U. S. S. Macon, the navy's newest air giant, which left Lakehurst, N. J., naval air station last night on a training cruise. The Macon will escort the foreign airmen to the Brooklyn base, where army, navy, coast guard and official representatives of the city will be on hand to welcome the visitors.

Roosevelt Takes Another Day Off

Washington, July 19 (AP)—President Roosevelt arranged to stay away from his office one more day today at the suggestion of his physician to complete fully his recovery from Monday's indisposition.

The President was ready to return to his desk in the executive office, but Dr. Ross T. McIntire, of the Naval Hospital, suggested another day of relaxation.

Marvin H. McIntyre, a secretary to the President, described the indisposition as a slight cold. He said Mr. Roosevelt had no temperature and was feeling all right. All engagements for the day were cancelled.

Dr. Jackson, Former Boston Pastor, Dead

Grand Rapids, Mich, July 19 (AP)—Dr. Charles E. Jackson, 55, native of Boston and dean of St. Mark's Episcopal pro-cathedral here for 11 years, died today after a brief illness. The widow and three daughters survive.

Dr. Jackson previously served as curate of the Church of the Epiphany in New York, rector of the Church of Christ in Newark, N. J.; at St. John's in Boston, and at Fall River, Mass.

U. S. TO DEFEND 5 IN MALLORCA

Madrid, July 19 (AP)—Claude Dawson, American-consul-general at Barcelona, will leave for Palma Mallorca tonight to handle the case of five imprisoned Americans who allegedly attacked a civil guard 42 days ago.

Ambassador Claude G. Bowers will confer tomorrow with Manuel Azana, Spanish premier and war minister, about the case.

Those held in Palma jail are Mr. and Mrs. Clinton B. Lockwood of West Springfield, Mass.; Rutherford Fullerton of Columbus, O.; Roderick F. Mead of New York and Edmund W. Blodgett of Stamford, Ct.

Four Bishops Back From Visit to Rome

New York, July 19 (AP)—An archbishop and three bishops of the Catholic Church returned from Rome today on the liner Rex.

They were Archbishop John T. McNicholas, of Cincinnati; Bishop Urban J. Vehr, of Denver; Bishop John J. Dunn, of New York, and Bishop James A. Walsh, of Maryknoll, N. Y., superior general of the Catholic Foreign Mission Society of America.

POST SPEEDING BY HALF MARK

Moscow, July 19—Wiley Post, American round-the-world flier who hopped off from Irkutsk at 4 a. m. Greenwich mean time (midnight E. D. T.) today for Khabarovsk, was last reported passing over Verkkne Oudinsk, about 160 miles from Irkutsk at 5:50 Greenwich mean time (1:50 a. m., EDT). The flier thus has accomplished more than half of his job in the sixth lap of his flight.

The American airman hopped off from Irtusk at 7 a. m., Moscow time (11 p. m., Tuesday, E. S. T.), after remaining here since 3:45 p. m. (7:35 a. m., E. S. T.), while his advantage over the time recorded by him and Harold Gatty two years ago was whittled to a slim margin.

Bad weather, which caused him to lose precious hours on the jaunt from Moscow to Novosibirsk, again dogged him and forced him to stay here longer than he wanted to.

When he landed here from Novosibirsk he was 16 hour and 34 minutes ahead of his previous mark. He left that place at 9:02 a. m. Tuesday, Moscow time, having rested for only two hours and 35 minutes there. He and Gatty stayed in Irkutsk two hours and 15 minutes.

They were 91 hours and 59 minutes out of New York when they landed here, but Post reached Irkutsk in 75 hours and 25 minutes.

Groton Man Held as King of Confidence Workers

Charged with being one of the cleverest confidence men to appear in Boston in a decade, Clifford E. Bixby, 50, Hollis st., Groton, was held for further hearing by Judge Brackett in Municipal Court today.

Bixby, who was arraigned on ten counts of larceny was tried and found guilty on eight. The other two cases will be heard tomorrow.

According to complaints by managers of department stores, Bixby, well dressed and with the air of executive about him, appeared at the credit managers' offices and represented himself as the president of the Webber Co. of West Groton, arranged for the purchase of merchandise on credit. His immaculate dress fooled most of the credit departments.

When bills were forwarded to Bixby at the Webber Co. office they were returned with the notation that no such person was in their employ.

In addition to the 10 complaints already filed against him, police told the court that there were 12 other stores which have complained of similar thefts.

Just Take a Nap After Crash

Newburyport, July 19—If you ram your car into a tree in the middle of the night don't get excited—just step out of the wreckage and take a nap before you do anything drastic.

That is the approved new procedure in case of an auto accident, at least for Talbert Hays of Portsmouth, N. H., and Everett B. Bickford of Newmarket, N. H.

But it does not have the approval of Newburyport police. They found a wrecked car on a lonely stretch of Rabbit rd., near Salisbury. It was empty. So they checked the New Hampshire license plates and wondered what could have happened to the victims.

Came the dawn and the officers of the law decided to have another look at the scene of the accident.

Arrived there, they found Bickford, the owner of the car, and Hays, his driver, peacefully napping behind some bushes.

Immediately the police became alarm clocks, ringing into Hays' ears that he was under arrest for drunken driving; into Bickford's ears that he was held as just a run-off-the-road drunk.

BOOKS---And Other Things

By Charles Hanson Towne

"Of making many anthologies there is no end," and evidently, so many hundreds—perhaps thousands—having been compiled in this fascinating racket, it has become necessary to bring a new one before the public with some original idea behind it.

So it has remained for Mr. William Rose Benet to think of a new slant. He has gathered together "Fifty Poets" (Duffield & Green) under one cover—American poets, if you please—and asked each to select his or her favorite own poem and describe the mood or circumstance of its creation. The result, in some instances, is amusing; in others, amazing.

Many of the poets did not know their favorite children. Others leaped at the chance to single one out. Miss Millay, bless her, did not approve of the idea of the book at all; and Mr. Pound, easy to understand in this one instance, stated truly that "literature is what is printed on the page." Dorothy Parker, always absentminded; John Crow Ransom and Maxwell Bodenheim did not reply at all to the editor's repeated letters; and Conrad Aiken was in accord with Miss Millay in not liking the idea.

Poets are notoriously frank, especially with one another.

* * *

Mr. Benet includes one of his own pieces, "at the request of his publishers," which lets him out nicely. John V. A. Weaver is strangely absent, as are Theodosia Garrison, Arthur Guiterman and Percy MacKaye. This is not surprising, when certain other names are seen, far less widely known; but on the whole it is an intelligent selection that the editor has made; and his notes concerning each of his contributors are chatty and informative, though once in a while he is a little careless, as when he speaks of Elizabeth Coatsworth:

"And beside (sic) writing poetry," etc.

* * *

Mr. Markham was torn between his Hoe-man, as he lightly alludes to him, and a passage from "Virgillia." He left it to Mr. Benet to decide, and, of course, "The Man with the Hoe" won out. Other poets left the final choice with the editor, which rather spoils the main idea of the anthology.

Sara Teasdale is the only poet included who is now dead; but Mr. Benet explains this by telling us that he had asked her for a selection some months before her untimely end, and felt in duty bound to publish it. It is the exquisite "Arcturus in Autumn."

* * *

If you imagine that only women are dieting these days, you should read "Whiteman's Burden" (Viking Press), by Margaret Livingston Whiteman and Isabel Leighton. A clever title, that, with a jacket by Peter Arno, revealing a now slender Paul Whiteman carrying on his strong young back that other Paul Whiteman before he achieved the loss of 113 pounds.

SAILING . . . WE MAY AS WELL BE FRANK about it . . . sailing is not a very exciting sport to watch, we think . . . however, this is the time of year when little boats and big boats are skimming over the waves in an effort to go nowhere in a hurry and watch it we must if we wish to record for history what this generation is doing in the month of July on the North and South Shores . . .

FAITH CONANT

The brutal beast (they are the most harmless looking craft you can imagine) races were run off yesterday from the float at the Hotel Rockmere in Marblehead and the little skippers and their crews made a splendid showing . . .

The age limit for the contestants was from 10 years to 16 . . . it would appear that most of them were in the earlier class and were they game? Being blown out to sea, taking in buckets of water and even capsizing, did not dampen their enthusiasm as they maneuvered for position or worked for the advantage around the buoys . . .

A strong south-westerly breeze gave the young skippers a good tryout around the mile and a half course . . .

In the first division, dark-eyed Gloria Murphy in her Snap arrived at the finish first, with William Haskel in Wendy, Faith Conant in Katydid and Marcia Fallon in the Widge, second, third and fourth respectively . . .

Janet Pierce, pretty daughter of the Walworth Pierces of Boston and Marblehead, brought her Maybe in to first place in the second division and red-headed Dicky Smith sailed Redpepper very expertly into the first position in the third division . . .

Cool and Refreshing at Marblehead

THE BOYS AND GIRLS HAD A GRAND time and when the races were finished clambered aboard the Fo'cas'le for ice cream, cake and ginger ale . . .

It was hot when we left the city but the deck of the Fo'cas'le overlooking Marblehead harbor was cool and delightful . . . blue, blue sky flecked with fleecy clouds canopied the heavens reflected in the waters below . . . white sails floated by on the horizon . . . slim craft with sails furled rode easily at anchor and there was the hush of a summer day all about us . . .

Under the gayly striped awnings groups of ladies played bridge silently at little tables as they sipped cool concoctions . . . stewards in white ducks moved noiselessly about . . . from the sands below the sound of a gay laugh broke the stillness as a mermaid climbed upon a rock and shouted to her swimming companion . . . it was so very natural, and peaceful, we longed to remain for a week or a month with not a thought of editions, or adjectives, or anything . . . just the sea and sky and our lazy thoughts . . .

Marblehead is a wonderful spot in which to spend a summer . . . there is always something to do, sailing, motoring, antique hunting, bathing and let us not forget gossiping . . . we hadn't been down there 10 minutes when a sudden breeze brought us the news of a "rift in the lute" of the Freddie Lymans but by this time that may not mean a thing . . .

Maybe Just Another Summer Flirtation

THE WILD WAVES WERE SAYING that Robert Leeson is seen constantly in the company of a certain wealthy New York widow . . . which again may be just another summer flirtation . . . but it would certainly appear that young George McQuestion has a one-track mind where the Fair Things are concerned . . . !

We stayed for a few pieces by the Fo'cas'le Privateers (Joe Holmes and his musicians) as they gave their daily tea-dance orchestrations and reluctantly climbed into the old Buick and drove back to town . . .

In our mail we found that the Eel River Beach Club at Plymouth are inviting us down to a dance on Saturday night, July 29 . . . Mr. Charles W. Bartlett in charge and Sammy Liner's Orchestra serving sweet strains of music . . .

Wanderbird Arrives in England

HAVE WE FORGOTTEN TO STATE that the Wanderbird with Warwick Thompkins, skipper, arrived at Falmouth, England, July 17, after a trip of 19 days across the Atlantic under sail . . . which means that the E. N. O. and the others who shipped as passengers arrived safely . . .

Princess and Sweetface are having the time of their lives at Camp Four Winds, Girl Scout Camp at Bournedale on Cape Cod, where they are taking their junior life-saving tests and canoeing tests for merit badges . . . this is a marvelous place to send young girls for the summer . . .

Molly O! is at the Lovell's camp at Sandy Neck in Barnstable . . . Mrs. Lovell is Mrs. B. Nason Hamlin's sister and all the children adore her . . . Molly is as brown as a berry!

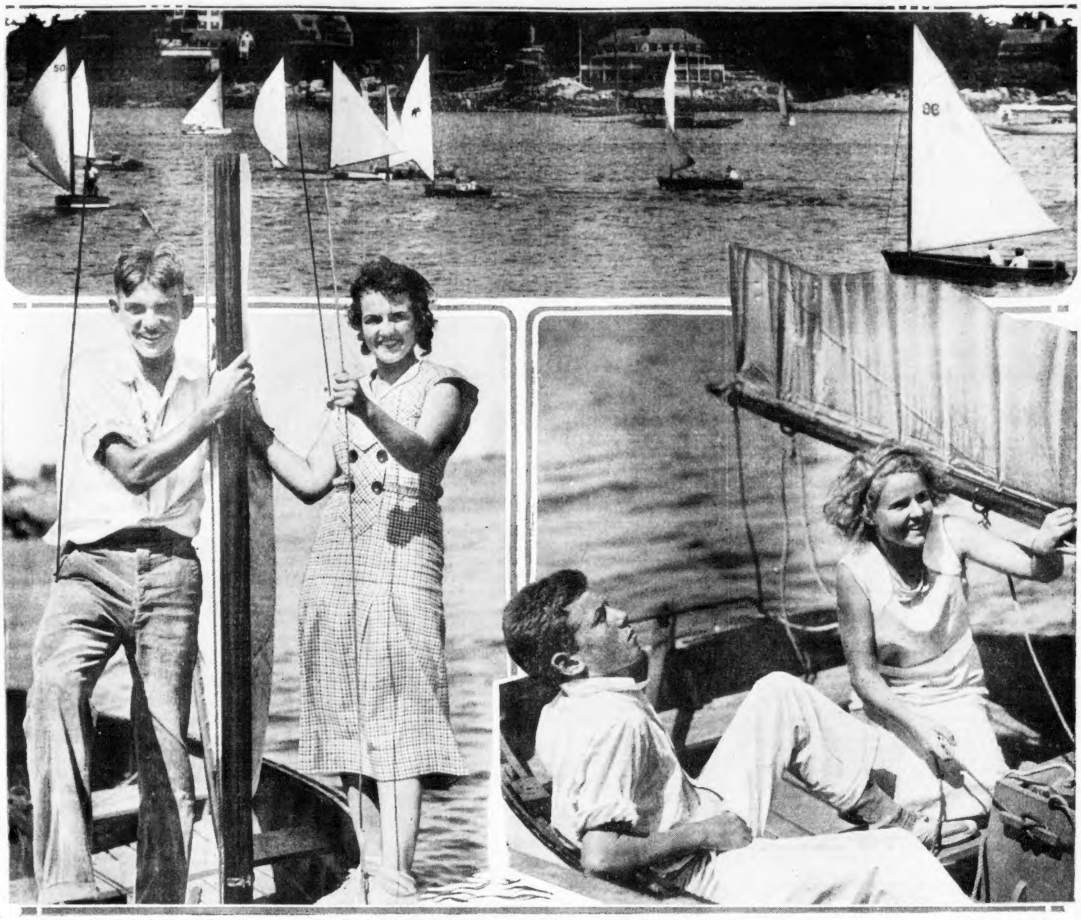
Chatty Notes of Social Circles

MISS MARGARET SWAIN, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Howard T. Swain of Commonwealth ave., has been a guest at the Association of Junior League Clubs at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York, on her way to make a visit in Youngstown, N. Y., for two weeks.

MISS MARION NOTTAGE whose engagement to Mr. J. Girard Chandler 2d of Malden was announced in June, has just returned from New York where she served as maid of honor in the wedding of Miss Nina Jenkins of Bronxville to Mr. Henry Carr of Philadelphia. Miss Nottage is a Lee School and Vassar graduate and was presented in season of 1927-28. She has not as yet decided on any definite date for her wedding.

MISS ANNE POLLARD SORTWELL, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin F. Sortwell, Jr., of Beverly Farms will be presented by her parents at a dance at Twin Cedars, their home, October 13. Miss Sortwell is having an unusually busy summer, teaching many youngsters along the North Shore horseback riding. This is the second season for her school where she specializes in teaching jumping.

YOUTH GIVEN YACHTING SPOTLIGHT FOR DAY AT MARBLEHEAD



RICHARD PIERCE GLORIA MURPHY JOHN M. BETH JANET PIERCE

VICTORY WAS THEIRS in the first division of the Brutal Beast races at Marblehead, the age limit for contestants being from 10 to 16 years. Gloria Murphy and Richard Pierce were all smiles as they received the plaudits of the yachting fraternity after they had put their yacht, Snap, across the finish line first. A southwest breeze was strong enough to make the racing keen. HERE'S ANOTHER PAIR OF WINNERS. Janet Pierce and John M. Beth brought their boat, Maybe, across the finish line ahead in the second division. Janet is the daughter of the Walsworth Pierces of Boston and Marblehead, and has proven herself a capable yachting fan. The scene at the top shows the small craft in one of the races of the afternoon. Following the races, the young folk were entertained at the Fo'cas'le, from where many society leaders watched the races.

Barbara Shepard to Wed in August

Miss Barbara Shepard, daughter of Mrs. George Shepard of Boston and Marblehead Neck has chosen Saturday Aug. 5 as the date of her marriage to Mr. Benjamin Appleton Hunneman, son of Mr. William Cooper Hunnneman of Boston.

The ceremony, which is to be solemnized with extreme simplicity before the immediate families of the bridal couple in the Unitarian Church in Marblehead, will be followed by a large reception at the summer home of Mrs. Shepard at Marblehead Neck.

Mrs. James Cunningham Gray, Jr., of Cambridge and Marblehead Neck, will be the only attendant of the prospective bride.

The best man will be Mr. Dexter R. Hunneman of Hamilton, a brother of the bridegroom, and Mr. John Scott of Boston and Mr. Robert Thayer of Providence will serve as ushers.

The prospective bride was educated at Mrs. Morrill's school in New York and Miss Lee's in Boston, where she was a classmate of Mrs. Gray's.

Mr. Hunneman was graduated from Harvard in 1922, where he belongs to the Hasty Pudding Club, Institute of 1770, D. K. E., D. U. and the Harvard Club of Boston.

Fred Fitzgeralds Among Patrons at Rockingham Races

THE RACES WILL BE CONTINUED at Rockingham Park, Salem, N. H., until Saturday and are drawing record crowds. The new betting machines offer a strong temptation to pick a winner and the socially prominent are much in evidence.

Sally Fitzpatrick

We glimpsed popular Mrs. Norbert Reilly of Cambridge with charming Mrs. Vincent Greene, of Belmont; Miss Katherine Donnelley, daughter of Mrs. Edward Donnelley, of Dover, Miss Sally Fitzpatrick, attractive debutante daughter, of this year, of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fitzpatrick, of Brookline, with the two Donnelley boys; Mr. and Mrs. William C. Cox of Cohassett, Judge William Day and Mrs. Day, Dist. Atty. William J. Foley and Mrs. Foley, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Leary and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fitzgerald, youngest son of John F. Fitzgerald.

From out of town, Mrs. Fred A. Higgins of Andover was entertaining a party of friends at the clubhouse, including Mr. and Mrs. Murray Burke of Winchester, who have just returned from their honeymoon to Bermuda, and Dr. and Mrs. Herbert Craig of Lawrence, who are also just back from their wedding trip. Mrs. Louis Smith, wife of the general manager of the New Hampshire Horsebreeders' Association was present, in an ensemble of black and yellow.

AT ROCKHOLM, ANNISQUAM, yesterday, Mrs. Charles L. Norton was hostess to members of the Salem Garden Club, on their visit to Cape Anne. Tea was served in the garden.

Latest Notes of Fashionables

By Dorothy Whipple Fry

MISS SERITA BARTLETT, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mathew Bartlett of Boston and Beverly Farms, is engaged assisting in arranging the annual North Shore tennis tournament. Her golden brown hair is coquettishly curled and she is wearing a white pique sport rig that is exceedingly good looking.

Miss Catherine Winthrop, dark and attractive daughter of Mrs. Frederick Winthrop of Hamilton, also a tennis player of note, is wearing a yellow and white gingham.

Mrs. Paul Agassiz Shaw (Betty Pope) is another young matron of the North Shore who appears in an exquisite afternoon georgette print of soft shade of mauve and blue. Not only is her afternoon wear outstanding, but her sport clothes are exceedingly modish. Her new light gingham linen ensemble is gay and snappy with a little yellow linen hat to match.

Mrs. Albert C. Burrage, Jr., also interested in tennis, is seen wearing the modish combination of white and yellow. The suit being of white wool with a light yellow sweater and smart little tie to match.

Mrs. Robert F. Herrick is wearing an especially gorgeous red print dress and sporting one of her wide brimmed picture hats that are so becoming to her. Her coat of soft grey with a sumptuous fur collar was lovely on her.

Mrs. Harvey Bundy looks charming in sport clothes, her good looking sport rig of blue grey with broad brimmed horizon blue hat is most becoming.

Mrs. Robert W. Knowles, tall and distinguished looking with lovely blue eyes and an engaging smile wore a brown and white print with matching broad brimmed hat.

Lawn Fete at Faxon Estate in Milton

The extensive grounds of Mrs. Robert Faxon's estate in Milton are the scene today of a lawn fete given by the Junior Welfare League of Quincy to benefit the Family Welfare Society and the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

Mrs. Faxon was Miss Rebecca Hallowell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hallowell of Readville, before her marriage to Mr. Faxon, which was one of the outstanding social events of the spring of 1932.

Miss Alice Homer is chairman of the group arranging the benefit and she is assisted by Mrs. Faxon, Mrs. Stoddard Bigelow, Mrs. Donald MacKay, Mrs. Frank Remick.

AMERICA'S BIGGEST-SELLING PACKAGE SOAP

Eat and Keep Fit---A New and Official Reducing Diet for You

3 Pounds First Week, Then Pound a Week, and All Good Fun

Copyright, 1933, for the Boston Evening American

Eat and be fit!

The safe, sane, effective, attractive and economical reducing diet at last!

From the shining white diet kitchens of Boston's famous diet clinic in City Hospital comes the "Keeping Fit Diet," which any person in normal health, but carrying too much poundage, will welcome.

Gently, efficiently, the "Keeping Fit Diet" will melt off the surplus pounds—and your precious supply of energy will NOT be decreased, but rather it will be enormously increased, since the diet is scientifically balanced to include every necessary element to keep the body in superb condition.

Here are important points in the "Keeping Fit Diet" which have seldom if ever before been incorporated in any one reducing diet:

1—There is absolutely no need to ever be hungry during the entire dieting period. There is no need to figure calories; 1500 calories a day are assured in the diet.

2—The first week the average poundage lost will be in the neighborhood of three pounds; after that each week will see a steady, healthy loss of one pound.

3—Resistance to colds and disease is kept at par; you will find yourself better able to throw off small ills like colds.

4—No matter how energetic a life you lead in business, in the home, in sports and play, the "Keeping Fit Diet" provides all the energy you can possibly need.

5—Unless your meal schedule is under the supervision of a doctor, it is 100 to 1 that the "Keeping Fit Diet" offers a better balanced ratio of the needed minerals, proteins, vitamins and roughage, than the average home menu, so that even the person of normal weight would be benefited in health by following it.

6—Best of all, as far as the budget is concerned, the "Keeping Fit Diet" requires no extra expenditure. It is economical to the extreme.

As in any specialized diet, the person who is not in normal condition, or who is ill, is wise to have his or her personal physician's approval. The "Keeping Fit Diet" is scientifically balanced for the average person. But of course some one of us who needs special fare or who is deficient in one element, may need more of it than is provided. The family doctor can always be depended on to give reliable information in such a case.

Pouches Under Eyes Can Be Corrected

By Therese Deschamps

PUFFINESS under the eyes is a real enemy to beauty. No matter how one's features are formed if the eyes are healthy and bright, one has a chance to appear more attractive than she really is. Not so, though, when the eyes have unpleasant pouches beneath them. "They look so terrible, but I don't know what to do," writes one woman in asking this column for assistance.

Pouches under the eyes, so some physicians tell us, can be inherited, in which case nothing much can be done about them. Ordinarily they are the result of fatigue, loss of sleep, or intestinal disturbances.

Plenty of Sleep

Anyone with this beauty ill should be careful of her diet, should drink at least six glasses of water a day and should see to it that she gets plenty of sleep.

The beauty treatment that one should give such eyes includes both massage and an astringent. Take a special eye cream or a "jelly" prepared for the purpose of strengthening loose tissues and smooth it gently around the eyes.

Use the cushion part of the second and third fingers; start in by the nose, above the eyes and smooth out and around under, ending again at the nose. Pat ever so gently along the same route. One beauty specialist has a soft rubber eye strap that can be put on after this treatment to help reduce the puffiness.

On All Night

This cream or "jelly" can be left on all night. If the condition is rather pronounced it is well to apply pads of cotton saturated in cold water and special astringent and leave them on for five minutes. Afterward you pat in a nourishing cream.

There is another preparation, too, which is excellent if the condition is quite advanced. That is a muscle tightener which one pats gently around the eyes. Its action is swifter than most such preparations and it tightens without drying.

For the names of preparations mentioned in this article, please send a stamped, self-addressed envelope and state your request. We have also some special eye exercises which you can have if you wish. Address Therese Deschamps, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston. This department is continued each week in the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Better Refuse "Gigolo"

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a lively, sociable girl, and am not considered bad looking. Am seventeen years old and do not go out much, so don't meet many people. Recently I was invited to a party where I met a boy about my own age. Since then, we have goen out together, but although he is only seventeen, he has four girl friends before me. He is unpopular with the other boys and is often called "gigolo." His worst fault is jealousy and he is very conceited. Besides this he acts foolish at times and also babyish. I have been told I am too good for him. What can I tell him to make him understand I don't care to go with him any more?

JENNY.

Dear Jenny: Nothing easier. Just politely decline when he invites you to take a walk or go to the movies with him. But, as you tell me he is so "babyish," I hope you will refuse him nicely and not hurt his feelings."

Beauty Questions and Answers

Kinky Hair

Question—I am confronted with what seems to me a serious problem. My hair is course, thick and somewhat kinky. I do not approve of the method of thinning it out. If you could advise an inexpensive method of ridding my hair of its kink and keeping it from flying up in the air, I shall be very much obliged. Miss S. K., Roxbury, Mass.

Answer—Science knows how to put curls into hair, but we haven't found out how to rid i' of natural ones. The reason no doubt is that everyone likes curly hair. I should advise, even though you say you disapprove, that you go to some very competent hairdresser and let him thin the hair out from underneath. He won't cut it in "hunks" as inexperienced hairdressers are likely to do. Then I suggest that you use brilliantine to keep the hair down, and that you have finger waves to change the kinks to curls.

If You Get Hungry

Although it is unlikely that anyone following the "Keeping Fit Diet" will feel any pangs of hunger between meals, if there is a desire for something to eat it may be satisfied in the morning with a cup of bouillon made of beef, lamb or chicken, with every bit of fat skimmed off, and a cracker or two. In the afternoon, if you needs must, black coffee, or tea with lemon, and a wafer or two are permissible.

If you are fond of white bread, do not feel you must shun it altogether. White and dark breads have approximately the same caloric value, but the dark breads are advocated because of their higher mineral, vitamin and roughage content.

The day you start the "Keeping Fit Diet" weigh yourself, making note of the pounds, the date and the time. To do yourself and the diet justice, use the same scales, on the same day of the week, at the same time, every week, and keep a written record of your weight.

'Athlete's Foot Should Be Treated

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

IT IS PROBABLE that from now until the early fall I will receive many inquiries requesting information about "athlete's foot," or as it is more commonly known, "ringworm." This disease has been extremely prevalent for the past two summers. Athlete's foot, or "dermatophytosis," the medical name for this affliction, is caused by a parasite found at contaminated bath beaches, public pools and gymnasiums. Contrary to a popular notion, the disease is of a serious nature. I know of many cases that have resulted in serious infections which could have been prevented had proper measures been taken. When neglected the infection may spread up the leg and involve the skin and glands of the body.

Dr. Copeland

If you have been bathing in a public beach or pool and notice a reddish spot on the skin of the sole of the foot, do not neglect it. If it is ringworm it will become pale in the center and form a ring-like appearance. The outer part of the ring is raised, reddened and scaly; the inner portion is less conspicuous and the color gradually fades towards the center. The middle of the ring may be the same color as the normal skin or have a pale pinkish appearance. This eruption may last for several days or even weeks when it will reappear elsewhere on the foot.

A protection against ringworm that I strongly recommend is the wearing of slippers when walking from the beach to the bathhouse. Avoid walking barefoot and you will minimize the danger of contracting this annoying and distressing affliction. Do not borrow another person's slippers. The disease is extremely contagious and easily passed from one individual to another.

Send Cousin Gift or Note

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I have a cousin in a distant city and he is to be graduated from the College of Pharmacy very soon. Really I don't know what kind of a gift to send him, or should I send him a note. If a note, what should I write?

LOUIS.

Whether you send a gift or a note depends entirely on your own choice. If you send a gift it might be a book—always a good graduation gift—or a wallet, a pen and pencil set, an evening scarf, or day or evening handkerchiefs. If you write him a note, the "theme song" should be your congratulations on his being graduated and your high wishes for his happiness and success.

The Marry-Go-Round; Life of Epigram

By HELEN ROWLAND

EVERY WOMAN remembers the greatest compliment that ever was paid her, and I am no exception.

* * *

Perhaps the most flattering bouquet that I ever received was when some scenario writer inserted a dear old epigram of mine into a screen play made from the book of a famous writer, instead of the author's own immortal lines.

Helen Rowland

* * *

The epigram was: "A husband is what is left of a bachelor after the nerve has been extracted."

* * *

The second greatest compliment I ever received was when a nationally known sports writer devoted a whole column to the praise of a philosophical barkeep who had chalked across the mirror above his bar the following "deathless words":

* * *

"It takes a woman 20 years to make a man of her son—and another woman 20 minutes to make a fool of him."

* * *

A wisecrack is not a butterfly, which dies in a day. It has a long life and can be used (by its author) in plays, in books and on radio, when it is old enough to vote. When the late depression took all our shirts it left me some forty thousand or fifty thousand epigrams and wisecracks, to which all rights are carefully protected. And if any more of my brain babies are kidnaped and palmed off on innocent editors and writers as orphans I'm going to scream!

"Mother, what would we ever do without KLEENEX?"
Illustration and text copr. 1933, Kleenex Co.

Mothers find Kleenex brings new comfort to children, saves washing, stops the expense of lost handkerchiefs, assures cleanliness!

SOFT, gentle Kleenex for tender little noses! Kleenex, strong and absorbent, to take up every drop of cod liver oil, orange juice or milk that overflows from baby mouths—a clean and tidy bib that never has to be washed!

Kleenex for bandages and minor wounds. Kleenex for applying salves and ointments. Kleenex, downy-soft and gentle, for Baby's toilet tissues. Kleenex for drying chafed little limbs. Kleenex for dusting on that soothing powder.

No wonder children in the millions of homes where it is in constant use—ask: "Mother, what would we ever do without Kleenex?" And children need this safeguard against germ-carrying, cold-spreading handkerchiefs. From the very first sniffle, remember: the only safe handkerchiefs are those you can use and destroy at once—Kleenex disposable tissues.

And no handkerchief washing to do or pay for!

Kleenex is made under the most hygienic conditions. It is kept clean, hygienic, while in use by the patented, self-dispensing, pull-out box. Hands never enter to contaminate or mess up the other sheets, or to take out more than is required—an assurance of economy!

Try large-size Kleenex

Recommended for cosmetic use is large-size Kleenex, three times regular size; also useful as guest towels, dust cloths, etc. Both sizes at all drug, dry goods and department stores.

CARNERA IS SOUGHT FOR FILM

M-G-M Wants Champion for Picture Starring Max Baer; Lupe Velez Featured

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor, Universal Service

(Copyright, 1933, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Los Angeles, July 19—In New York today Primo Carnera, world's heavyweight champion, is being invited to sign on a Mero-Goldwyn-Mayer contract. Carnera is wanted for "The Prize Fighter and the Lady" with Max Baer and Lupe Velez. The only fly in the ointment is that Baer is the hero in the picture and knocks out Carnera.

Louella Parsons

The psychology, Carnera's manager may feel, is bad for him. On the other hand Carnera may believe the salary is sufficiently compensating for a film knockout.

Would that be a money maker or wouldn't it with these two gentlemen of sporting circles doing their fistic stuff?

With a new haircut and the new name of Mimi, Miriam Jordan is being given one of the sexiest plays of the year. "Marie Galante," sensational novel by Jacques Duval, which was originally slated for Clara Bow, will give the world a chance to see the new Miriam Jordan. She is certainly pretty and with a little less aloofness she may be one of the surprises of the year. Who knows? Spencer Tracy, old reliable and one of the favorites on the Fox lot, will play the male lead. This will be Raoul Walsh's first picture after he returns to Fox.

* * *

Ginger's Songs

The whispered yarn that one of Ginger Rogers' best songs was cut out of "Gold-Diggers of 1933" may be responsible for her new contract with Twentieth Century. Personally I think the song numbers that Ginger did in the picture were sufficiently good to land her a job. Today Radio, with whom she has a contract, consented to an agreement which she signed with Darryl Zanuck for two pictures a year. One of these is "Broadway Through a Keyhole," the Walter Winchell number. Paul Kelly, who plays one of the male leads in this picture, is due here by motor. Hollywood is curious to know what the reaction of the great wide world will be over the signing of Kelly.

* * *

Hoot for Air Role

You wouldn't go about trying to break your neck in an airplane to get a job, yet Hoot Gibson will tell you if you talk to him that the tumble he had, the cracked vertebrae and the scarred face, may be responsible for an exciting offer he has had from one of the well known film companies. Hoot is wanted to make an airplane thriller with the same kind of a spill that he had at the air races. I should say it would take a lot of courage to fly again after his experience but he tells me as soon as he is out of bed he is going to start flying immediately, that the airplane picture greatly appeals to him.

Chatter in Hollywood

Reports are current in Hollywood that once Eddie Sedgewick gets his freedom he won't remain single very long.

The next Mrs. Sedgewick, according to excellent authority, will be Ebba Havez, former well known scenario writer and ex-wife of Gene Havez, song writer. Mrs. Sedgewick is now in Reno establishing a residence and getting ready to free the comedy director from whom she has lived apart these many years.

Many are the stories told of the sweetness and kindness of Al Brettinger, production manager of United Artists. He never lost his perspective and never failed to do a favor for a friend. London fell for Victor McLaglen in a big way. He is now writing his life story in one of the big dailies. Walter Huston and Jack Pearl were in the same show 20 years ago and Huston and his brother immediately paid Baron Munchausen a call and made him welcome to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot. Here's news about a pioneer screen actor. Minor Watson is on the Columbia lot, playing a part in "Man's Castle." Sally Eilers, in spite of the fact that a divorce from Hoot Gibson seems imminent, sends him daily wires, inquiring about his health. Sally and her ex-leading man, Jimmy Dunn, did a little stepping out together at the Westchester Country Club while she was in New York. Fred Astaire was on the M.-G.-M. lot rehearsing for the Joan Crawford picture. He has just arrived here with his bride, formerly well known in New York social circles.

Snapshots of Hollywood

Another Hollywood matrimonial rumor put in cold storage, PAT DE CICCO giving a huge birthday party for THELMA TODD on the 29th; Mrs. LIONEL ATWILL'S good looking son, Walter Brooks, made a hit at the LIONEL BARRYMORES' wedding anniversary party; JACK OAKIE is again beauing MARY BRIAN; they were at the Coconut Grove; CARMEL MYERS' friends will attend her stage debut at the Pasadena Community Playhouse tonight and will be her guests later at her home at an after-theater party; ELSIE JANIS and her husband, GILBERT WILSON, playing all the games on the Ocean Park pier; more and more the film people go there for relaxation and laughs; CONSTANCE TALMADGE NETCHER suffering from a bad attack of sun poisoning; CONNIE says she is now going to be the pale lily type; TOWNSEND and CONSTANCE guests of honor at a colony party to be given by MAE SUNDAY; JACK DEMPSEY'S friends planning to welcome him and his pretty bride HANNAH WILLIAMS; PEGGY FEARS with three offers for dramatic roles up her sleeve, taking her time about making a decision; she is due back in New York in the fall to put on a revue. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Notre Dame Glee Club Packing Them in Keith's

RKO Keith's is breaking records this week, according to announcement by Thomas Meehan, Boston manager for RKO. Attendance is a capacity, due to the high merit of the stage show, headed by the Notre Dame Glee Club.

A NEW STARRING TEAM

Jimmie Dunn has a new flame in the "flickers"—Joan Bennett is his romance, in Jimmie's latest film, "Arizona to Broadway," which is featured on screen at the Paramount and Fenway, tomorrow.

Turns Waiter

Assistance League events are always newsy, for the movie stars are glad to hear the call to aid this worthy cause. The news photographer steps in, and, lo, the poor Indian chaser in the "Westerns," our hero, George O'Brien, is caught by the lens as he serves tea and cookies, to swell the charity fund. The lady who is buying is Betty Furness, who has had the feminine lead in a number of recent talkies.

"Punctual People" Get on Her Nerves, Lora Baxter Says

By ANNE FORD

Queer thing about Lora Baxter—she dreads "punctual people." She says they "get on her nerves." It may be her weakness that she thinks so—but she thinks so just the same. If you try to explain, as I did, during the interview, that it's a sort of inferiority complex to fear folk who are always on the dot of time, she just smiles sweetly in reply.

* * *

Mamselle Lora, hit of Broadway, comes to the Tremont next Monday in Arthur Beckhard's production of "Goodbye Again."

Lora Baxter

I knew all about her authorship aspirations, and all about her acting in which she quickly rose to stardom. I knew she had lived in almost every country on the globe—her father was a newspaperman who traveled everywhere. So I started asking her if she had any hobbies:

"Surest thing you know," she answered.

And what are they, pray?

"Penguins."

Penguins?

"Yes, and bears."

Bears?

"Love 'em," she sparkles. "Real bears, I mean."

"I love swimming too," she adds. "I hate pink, love aquamarines, love real tea for breakfast, and have superstitions.

She says she believes in numerology. He superstitions are those stage folk have always had.

I asked her about her writing.

"Proud of it," she explains. "First scenario I wrote was accepted. Metro bought it. Clara Bow starred in it. It was "Beyond the Rainbow.'"

She played opposite Leslie Howard in "The Animal Kingdom" on stage—she thinks he is a grand actor. She learned the lines for that part in six days; for the big role in "Strange Interlude" in nine days.

Lora is Blonde, of medium height, with blue eyes. I like her pink and white complexion—she says it is 100 per cent nature's.

Rines Orchestra Feature at Met

To celebrate the opening of the larger platinum salon at the Met, Joe Rines and his orchestra, beginning Friday, will play each night in the ballroom, from 8:30 until midnight. The salon has been entirely "done over." As added features next week, Harry Reser and his Eskimos, stage feature, will furnish music to be followed by Cab Calloway and his Cotton Club band.

Joe Rines

Manager Edward Smith announces that the salon is open to all patrons of the Metropolitan.

ETHEL BARRYMORE IN VARIETY

Star's Vaudeville Tour Will Include Week at Keith's; Will Do Dramatic Sketch

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Variety's being the spice of the life theatric may be the actress's reason for taking to vaudeville, but anyway, Ethel Barrymore is swinging from the "legit" into "big time." When a Barrymore tries "vode," it means something. For one point, it may be taken as a high sign of variety's mounting popularity with the paying portion of humanity. At the moment, we hear she will do a dramatic sketch, but her plans may change. If she does the skit, we may hail in advance the return of another of oldtime vaudeville features, when the sketch, the monologue man, the minstrel, and the Hebrew, or Dutch, or Irish comedian helped make up the programs.

* * *

Charles Koerner, new regional director for RKO in this sector, breaks the news to us. He recalls that six or seven years ago Queen Ethel of the Royal Family played the Keith houses, and now she makes her second step. This week the actress is starring in her play, "An Amazing Career," in which she appeared here this season past. Through tomorrow she enacts, at the Skouras-Hempstead Theater, in Hempstead, L. I., the role of the diva of many love affairs; Friday she begins her variety tour. Director Koerner informs us that she is to appear at Keith's in this city, either the week of Aug. 27, or of Sept. 7.

Ethel Barrymore

Building Up "Vode"

The signing of Ethel of the Barrymore clan is more significant than the mere capture of the star with the lure of big money. Let Koerner himself explain:

"Showmanship smells it in the wind—vaudeville is coming back strong. At the moment we who have to provide entertainment for large territories are planning ahead. In my own district, consisting of Upper New York State and New England, I expect to have 10 weeks of bookings for my shows, which will enable us to put far more into productions than if they were to appear only at a house or two.

"We are going at vaudeville in radical manner—we are building up modernistic revues which will have all the vaudeville features plus an up-to-the-minute presentation."

There will be a number of "super specials"—George White successes condensed and staged anew by him; a Jack Benny show, and a Helen Morgan unit. In the "Crazy Quilt" show will be Smith and Dale, Charlie King and Anita Page.

Change In Taste

Koerner says the new type will be the showman's answer to changing public taste.

"Big shows, and cleaner shows, are what we are preparing," he states. "People are tired of the 'dirt'; humor has got to be real humor, and the performers have got to depend solely on ability. So we are lining up the talent, and what we have coming this fall, will be the most pretentious that variety has had."

Marion Davies Is Star at Exeter

That delightful picture, "Peg o' My Heart," is featured on the Exeter screen tomorrow. In this Marion Davies has one of her best characterizations; as the colleen who falls heir to British wealth, she brings out all the humor and pathos of the Hartley Manners romantic comedy.

The associate picture at the Exeter for the rest of the week will be "Cocktail Hour," with Bebe Daniels.

Esplanade Concert

The Esplanade concert program follows:

Procession of Bacchus	Delibes
Overture to "The Bartered Bride"	Smetana
Second Movement from Symphony "Surprise"	Haydn
Fantasia "Samson and Delilah"	Saint-Saens
Polovetzian Dances from "Prince Igor"	Borodin
Barcarole from "Tales of Hoffmann	Offenbach
"Girls of Baden" Waltzes	Komzak
March of Homage	Wagner

Ends Saturday

The run of the lavish film extravaganza, "Gold Diggers of 1933," ends next Saturday night, at the Majestic. Performances are continuous from 10 a. m. until midnight the rest of the week.

The picture is one of the year's big hits, repeating the success of "42nd Street." Some of its stars are Warren William, Joan Blondell, Aline MacMahon, Ruby Keeler, Dick Powell, Guy Kibbee, Ned Sparks and Ginger Rogers; and highlights are the expert direction of Mervyn LeRoy and the dance direction of Busby Berkeley.

Globe Trotter

Aroused over the increasing number of kidnapings, Senator Copeland, of New York, in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, at Loew's State, pledges relentless war by the government on criminal abductors. He refers specifically to the victim of the latest outrage, Lieut. John J. O'Connell, Jr., of Albany, a picture of whom is shown. There is also a talk from Col. Walsh, young O'Connell's commander, who declares that this kidnaping should be taken as a personal affront by every national Guardsman in the country.

The return of prosperity is exemplified by pictures from the northwest, showing loggers speeding up the lumber business, full tilt. Secretary of the Interior Ickes in Washington, tells how distribution of the $3,300,000 public works fund will bring jobs to a million men. He also makes known that $238,000,000 of the sum is to be used to upbuild the navy, following which there are stirring pictures of the U. S. fleet, and a decriptive talk by the Globe Trotter.

KNAVE'S GIRL

By Joan Clayton

Patricia Feels Jealous Thrill as She Sees Tracy's Fiancee Pictured in the Paper

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

To help support her stepmother and stepsisters, young and beautiful Patricia Warren, a skilled card player, plays bridge for 50 cents an hour at parties given by the wealthy Mrs. Sycott. Julian Haverholt, noted bridge expert, offers to make Pat his secretary and partner. Pat meets Clark Tracy, the polo player and her ideal, at Mrs. Sycott's. Bill McGee, a racketeer, is interested in Pat, but she loathes him. However, afraid to refuse his invitation, she accompanies him to a New Year's Eve dance. He is shot by a rival gangster. Unable to find employment, Pat turns to professional bridge. One day she is stunned when Haverholt happens to be one of her opponents. She becomes unnerved and loses heavily. Haverholt takes her home and she consents to live there as his niece.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"I THINK when we finish, you'll be the smartest young woman in New York. Gosh, you can wear clothes!"

Patricia secretly agreed. Three evening frocks and evening sandals and lacy lingerie, a velvet wrap of a brilliant emerald green, a string of twisted amber, a sports dress or two, a trailing tea gown—her purchases grew and grew.

"What are you laughing at, Patricia?"

"Out of what you and I are going to win at bridge," he said blandly, sweeping aside all possible objections with one magnificent gesture. "Now that's nicely settled and our car is waiting, mademoiselle." Glancing at his watch, he said, "I should judge five minutes sufficient for you to put on your hat, to get your gloves and pocketbook."

EMPTY POCKETBOOK

"My completely empty pocketbook," qualified the girl.

"Is it?" he inquired innocently. Patricia ran to the table, picked up her pocketbook, looked inside. The inner purse bulged. Inside she found ten one hundred dollar bills. She looked at Julian.

"That goes on our account too," he said hastily. "You now owe me one thousand one hundred and twenty-seven dollars." Seeing gathering trouble, he added, "I had hoped you might like to send a part of it to your stepmother."

"Thank you. I would."

Patricia closed her pocketbook. Arm in arm she and Julian Haverholt walked out into the sunlight. The shopping trip was heaven. The man was an ideal companion for such an expedition. He had an eye for line and color; he knew the best and wanted it. He was tireless, he was patient, he was determined that this lovely, fluttered girl should be dressed not well, but perfectly.

"Yesterday I couldn't buy an extra pair of gloves. Today I decide that I can't afford chinchilla. Chinchilla!"

At four o'clock they wound up the orgy. Over tea cups they regarded each other triumphantly, discussed the purchases and concluded that they wouldn't change a thing.

"Only one thing," amended Patricia, staring at the long column of neat, accurate figures that was rather like a bridge score. "I wish I could pay you that enormous sum this very minute."

He twinkled at her.

"Don't you trust me, niece?"

"Certainly, uncle."

He was not amused.

"Never call me that again," he said it almost sharply. "Never call me anything except Julian, even in fun."

Surprised by the sharpness of his tone, she looked up. Something she saw in his face started that strange, thick beating of her heart. She stirred her tea, slowly.

"I never shall again, Julian," she said.

NEW LIFE

In the glamorous excitment and readjustment of the new life Patricia would have said, if she had been asked, that she had definitely put Clark Tracy out of her mind. She honestly thought so. But, next day as she dawdled over breakfast and idled through the morning paper she came upon a picture of Marthe March, Marthe, smart and trim, standing beside a wire-wheeled roadster, smiling into the camera, Marthe presented as one of the prominent visitors at the Automobile Show in progress at the Grand Central Palace. The picture fairly leaped from the page. Patricia recognized the other girl with a sense of physical shock. She read the caption:

"Miss Marthe March photographed with her new Madison, a car which proved to be the sensation of the show. Miss March is the debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Tilden March. Her marriage to Clark Tracy, the polo player, will be an event of the fall season."

For an instant Patricia experienced a wave of suffocating jealousy and anger. She had known from the first that Marthe and Clark were to be married in the fall. Seeing the announcement in type stamped the knowledge with a cold finality that made her feel sick. Presently, she quietly folded the paper, laid it on the breakfast tray and got out of bed. Haverholt had asked her to be downstairs at ten o'clock. They were to play bridge as partners for the first time.

The lovely new clothes overflowed the closet, rows of little shoes wrapped in tissue paper, fitted into drawers that pulled from the wall, piles of delicate lingerie, frocks on padded velvet hangers and shrouded in chintz, long silk stockings in a gay wall-papered cabinet. Deliberately Patricia selected her most becoming frock, a simple little morning dress, white of a lacy knit, leaving her arms bare and showing an oval of creamy white at the neck. Then there were ivory beads, patent leather pumps with square twinkling buckles, hose cunningly clocked. She dressed swiftly.

She studied her reflection in the mirror. Unwillingly she smiled; unwillingly she felt her spirits lift. Her hair was simply blazing this morning. She fluffed out the ruddy mass, held it sleekly close, cocked her head, considering. Just then Annie knocked at the door and peeped inside.

"Mr. Haverholt is waiting for you, Miss."

Patricia glanced at the clock. "It's only five past ten," she replied in surprise.

"He expected you at ten," returned the other reproachfully.

Powdering her nose quickly, Patricia ran downstairs. At nine minutes past ten she entered the card room. Julian Haverholt sat in a straight-backed chair, his elbows bent on a red leather table, his eyes, intent and serious, fixed upon a collection of cards spread out before him.

"Here I am," announced Patricia gayly. "Wearing one of my choicest dresses, too. How do I look?"

"You'd have looked a lot better to me ten minutes ago," said Haverholt, favoring her with a cold and fleeting glance. "Haven't you any conception of what my time is worth? Roughly I estimate it at about five dollars a minute."

Patricia checked an angry retort. She saw that they were not alone. Two pale young men were regarding them with owlish eyes from the settee.

"Sit down," said Haverholt impatiently. "Can't you see I'm busy?"

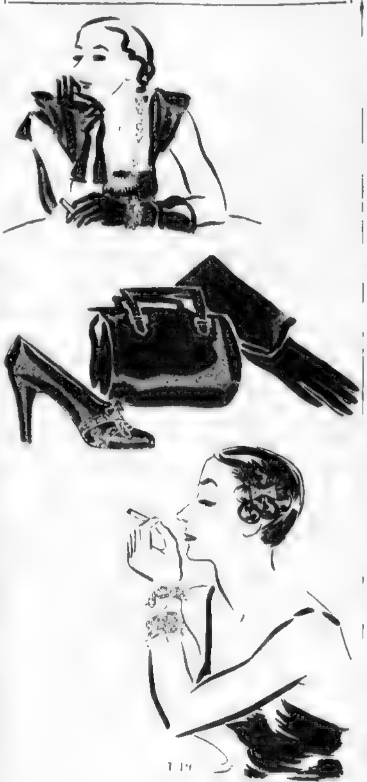
Illustrations and text copr. 1933, Kotex Co.

HERE is Kotex—just as soft, just as safe, just as comfortable as ever—but with added service, because of a processed center section that gives 20 to 30 per cent greater protection. Read the direction sheet to see how this is done.

Every advantage that won you over to Kotex is still here—the ease of disposal, the absorbency, the softness, the "Phantomized" ends, rounded and tapered.

The Equalizer pad cannot be copied or duplicated. It is protected by U.S. Patent No. 1,863,333. All drug, dry goods and department stores are now selling Equalizer Kotex.

Accessories Important



Satin, Taffeta Gowns Most Popular

Whether you're trousseau-gathering or not, you'll have most fun when you come to accessories on your shopping list. With them you'll have ample chance to prove your originality, for the outcome of your pursuit for gloves, hats, purses, scarfs, and such sundries will decide the fate of whatever clothes you've bought.

At the moment, satin and taffeta are in particular favor for evening and daytime accessories. Just to help you fly in the right direction we hereby drop a few clues.

When any new fabric is launched, look for it in dresses and suits, but also in accessories, which brings us to the point. Some of the best looking satin and taffeta gloves, hats, bags and jewelry to go with dresses of these fabrics have been scouted for you. You'll find them in the accompanying sketch. For instance, the stunning round zipper roll bag, with two square handles, terribly smart. And the bulky, 10-button length glove to wear either for daylight costumes or in the evening. This coming season watch for low eyelet oxfords, like the satin model sketched. With a pair like these, with inlays of moire piped in gold, you have the perfect addition to formal town clothes. Incidentally, with the advent of satin, pearls assume a new significance again.

At one of the most important June weddings the bride wore bridal gloves of white satin, edged in lace—a sartorial note which future brides will pounce on with glee!

Taffeta has been revived. This coming season many of our smartest women will wear it in the evening. And with it taffeta gloves that match or contrast. They're exactly the thing to wear if you want to add allure to a town print, tea-time chiffon dress, or cocktail gown. For daytime, include a taffeta purse, or stitched sailor.

Add this jewelry note: With a black evening dress, look for the new coral beads. That sounds desperately mid-Victorian—which is as it should—the result being very 1933! Rustling taffetas are as completely 1900 as the period when corals were such a favorite with adults. The modern necklace (sketched, of braided seed pearls combined with coral are extremely effective.

Many women keep their stones in vaults, and wear faithfully executed copies in public. Today anyone can buy exequisitely cut rhinestone (or diamante) evening jewelry that almost completely fools the average eye. Those sketched are magnificent examples!

Tasty Recipes for Serving Bananas

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Wednesday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

WHERE DO YOU keep your bananas? I hope not in the refrigerator because I've just been chatting with a well-known physician [illegible] that [illegible] of the [illegible] culinary [illegible].

"Many people," he told me, "do not know that until fully ripe, although they are a tropical fruit, bananas should be kept at room temperature and not in the refrigerator, because cold prevents their proper ripening and the development of their fine, natural flavor."

He went on to tell me that he even advises puree from well-ripened bananas for infants as young as four months, as well as for invalids and elderly people. And of course every intelligent housewife recognizes the banana as an economy food—a year round fruit sealed by mother nature in a germ proof package.

Last [illegible] we have a delicious banana pie for our dinner dessert, a crisp shell filled with fresh sliced bananas, topped with whipped cream, and we're especially pleased with the results we're getting by using bananas in frozen desserts.

Here are three favorite recipes to try in your electric refrigerator.

Banana Frozen Salad

½ lb. cream cheese
2 tbsps. crushed pineapple
⅓ cup cut cherries
2 tbsps. mayonnaise
1 tbsp. lemon juice
1 cup whipped cream
½ cup walnut meats cut fine
⅛ tsp. salt
3 well ripened bananas, cut in cubes

Add lemon juice and salt to mayonnaise and stir into cheese. Add pineapple, cherries and nuts folded in cream and, last, the bananas cut in cubes. Turn into mold, place in automatic refrigerator tray and freeze about three hours. Six servings.

Banana Mousse

1⅓ cups banana pulp (3 well ripened bananas)
1/3 cup powdered sugar
3 tbsps. lemon juice (½ lemon)
Pinch of salt
1 cup whipped cream

Mash bananas with a fork. Add lemon juice, sugar and salt, and beat well. Whip cream and fold into the mixture. Put in automatic refrigerator tray and freeze three hours. Six servings.

Banana Mousse (With Custard)

3 tbsps. sugar
1 whole egg
1 tbsp. flour
1 cup milk
1 tsp. vanilla
1 cup cream, whipped
2 well-ripened bananas, crushed

Beat egg well. Add sugar, stir in flour, add milk and cook until thick over hot water. Cool. Add vanilla, crushed bananas, whipped cream, and blend well. Place in automatic refrigerator try and freeze about three hours, or until set. Six servings.

Listen World—the Wife With a Past

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Elsie Robinson

TOO WARM TO THINK? Too bored to care what happens? Then here's a letter which is guaranteed to jar you out of your coma.

It is from a Modern Young Man. No, he isn't a sample of Flaming Youth! Few of them are. He is serious, sensitive, sufficently sentimental, yet also hard-headed like most of his kind. And he's talking about a subject which requires all of these qualities—his Future Wife.

WHAT SORT OF A WIFE DOES THE YOUNG MAN OF 1933 DESIRE?

Does he want the sort of a wife his father desired in 1900? Or his grandfather sought in 1875?

Perhaps you remember the pattern—the shrinking violet, innocent and undefiled. Perhaps you also remember what happened to unfortunate females whose lovers and husbands discovered that they did not fit that pattern, that they had, instead, insisted on experimenting with unconventional patterns of their own?

Does the young man of 1933 feel about such matters as his father or his grandfather would have felt?

Does he demand innocence in the girl he is to marry and a spotless record?

Or does he actually prefer to build a home with a partner who knows the world as he knows it, even though that knowledge may have been gained through painful experience?

Flippant and shocking questions? Neither! These are the most important questions in our life, for they affect the very foundation of human society—the home. Husbands and fathers are important citizens. BUT A NATION ACTUALLY STANDS OR FALLS ON THE QUALITY OF ITS WIVES AND MOTHERS.

So then, what quality is desired in the prospective wife and mother of 1933 by the prospective husband and father? Listen!

Dear Miss Robinson:

Recently a famous traveler asked "WHAT KIND OF A WIFE DOES THE AVERAGE INTELLIGENT, SELF-RESPECTING YOUNG AMERICAN DESIRE?" Perhaps my answer may prove interesting.

Let me preface it by saying that I am 27 years of age, have earned my living since I was 17, had two years in college, have an auto accessories business, come of good family with fine ideals—to which I try to live up.

AND YET MOST OF MY PARENTS' IDEALS ARE USELESS TO ME, BECAUSE I AM LIVING IN AN ENTIRELY DIFFERENT WORLD.

This is particularly true when it comes to marriage. The home in my father's and grandfather's time was a social and amusement center; even an industrial center. A man needed a wife who was a good home-maker and mother. If she filled that job she had no time for anything else, and her husband expected little else.

But now big business has taken over most domestic chores, and co-education and equal industrial opportunities have established an entirely new relationship between men and women.

Nowadays a boy grows up with girls, competes in sports with girls, goes into offices with girls. Naturally, when he comes to marry he wants a woman who will be a companion as well as a wife and mother.

And what does companionship imply? It implies a knowledge of life. But suppose that in acquiring that knowledge a girl has made some unwise experiments, faced some bitter disillusionment—should she therefore be regarded as unworthy of wifehood or motherhood? I don't think so.

I wouldn't marry a vulgar, promiscuous woman, but if a girl was sincere—if she had learned wisdom and tolerance from experience—I wouldn't feel that I had a right to question how she obtained that experience, or condemn her if the means had been unconventional.

And I think I speak for most modern young men. We like "good women" as much as our fathers did—but we no longer think that goodness consists in ignorance.

I am for the single standard. Let it be as clean as possible, for both sexes. But if unwise adventures do not unfit a man for the position of father and husband, why should they unfit a woman?

The important thing is that we enter marriage with healthy bodies and honorable intentions toward each other. A man has no right to demand more from a woman than he will demand of himself.

A Modern Young Man.

So there you have it. And is THAT—or IS that—the beginning of a New Deal between the sexes?

CHEESE AND POTATO SCALLOP

Pare and slice thin 1½ pounds of potatoes (about 6). Let soak in cold water to cover for one hour, then drain. Grate 1 cup of cheese, slice 2 onions thin and prepare ⅓ cup of soft bread crumbs. Fill an oven glass baking dish with alternate layers of the sliced potatoes, grated cheese, sliced onions and bread crumbs. Melt 2 tablespoons butter in 1½ cups hot milk. Add ½ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper and pour this over the potatoes. Bake in a slow oven (350 deg.) for 45 minutes or until the potatoes are tender. Serve hot.

STUFFED LIVER ROLLS

1½ lbs. thinly sliced calves liver
4 cups of soft bread crumbs
1½ cups drained crushed pineapple
1½ tbsps. minced green pepper
1 small onion, chopped fine
½ tsp. salt
½ cup pineapple juice

Combine all the ingredients with the exception of the liver. Mix well and spread on the liver slices, which have first been sprinkled with salt and pepper. Roll up the liver slices and make secure with a toothpick. Saute in hot fat until golden brown on all sides. Add two cups boiling water and simmer gently until tender. Remove rolls to hot platter and serve with a gravy made from the liquor that remains in the frying pan. Serve 6.

PASTEL CUP CAKES

½ cup butter
1 cup sugar
2 cups flour
2/3 cup milk
3 eggs

When the cake is mixed, separate into four parts. Leave one part white and flavor with vanilla, color another pink and flavor with lemon, another green and flavor with almond and add 2-3 square of melted chocolate to the last part and flavor this with vanilla. Line muffin tins with paper baking papers and put a little of each color into the cup. Bake in a moderate oven. Use any desired frosting.

MRS. FRANK PUFF,

PINEAPPLE SALAD SANDWICH FILLING

1 large loaf bread, white or graham
¼ lb. butter
6 pkgs. cream cheese
¾ cup cooked ham
1½ cups drained crushed pineapple
½ cup finely chopped walnuts
¼ cup finely chopped sweet pickle
2 tbsps. chopped pimiento
¾ cup pineapple tidbits
2 tomatoes
Mayonnaise
Lettuce
Maraschino cherries

Remove the crusts from the bread and cut in five lengthwise slices. Spread one side of the top and bottom layers, and both sides of the other three slices, with butter, which has been creamed. Spread the following fillings between the layers: 2 pkgs. cream cheese, thoroughly creamed and combined with the drained, crushed pineapple. Use this combination between the first and third layers and for the second use the chopped cooked ham moistened with mayonnaise and seasoned with paprika. For the fourth layer use the chopped nuts, sweet pickle and pimiento moistened with mayonnaise. Wrap the loaf tightly in waxed paper, set in the refrigerator for at least one hour. Spread the top and sides with plain or tinted cream cheese which has been thoroughly creamed. Decorate the top with [illegible] cherries. Place on a [illegible] and garnish with crisp lettuce [illegible] quartered tomatoes [illegible]. Serves [illegible].

NEW PROBE IN CAR DEATH

Rumors of foul play which have persisted since Lawrence L. Willard, Natick radio dealer vanished early on July 4, have caused an investigation of the strange disappearance to be opened by State Detective Edward J. Sherlock.

Willard's automobile was found in the Charles River near Death Bridge at the Medfield-Sherborn line but repeated searching of the river has failed to disclose any trace of the body.

"There has been so much talk of foul play," said Dist. Atty. Warren L. Bishop today, "that I did not want to take any chances and not investigate, so I assigned Detective Sherlock. He is checking on all the loose ends and I expect to have him report to me some time late today."

Willard's wife and his brother, the Rev. W. Wyeth Willard, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Providence, took personal charge of the search for the missing man's body after his empty car was pulled out of the river. The clergyman spent long days with police dragging for the body, and frequently donning a bathing suit, dived in vain.

'Purists Keep Out' Verdict on Dance

Chicago, July 19 (INS)—The fan dance of Miss Sally Rand at the World Fair's "Streets of Paris" will not be interfered with by an injunction from Judge Joseph B. David.

"Evil to him who evil thinks" quoted Judge David as he shooed the complainants from his courtroom.

"They've been dancing for years," said the court. "In the woods they call themselves nymphs. In Canada they are Doukhobors, and on roofs nudists. Let the prurient walk out if they don't want to see it."

Free Trip to World Fair for New England Boy and Girl; Cash Awards for 12 Others

Winners Allowed to Take Parents to Chicago

Fourteen New England children boys and girls are to participate in the awards from the greatest competition ever staged by a newspaper anywhere. Two of these children, a boy and a girl, accompanied by the parents of each are to be guests of the Boston Sunday Advertiser and the Boston Evening American on an all expense [illegible] which includes a glorious week spent in Chicago and at the Century of Progress Exposition, the greatest world's fair ever held.

Twelve other children are to receive $100 each, a grand total of $1,200 in the most interesting and entertaining competition imaginable. There are no votes to be cast, no subscriptions to be solicited, no bothering of your friends, in fact no effort whatever on the part of the boys and girls who participate. The age limit has been placed from 6 to 12 years. If you are within that prescribed range that's all there is to it. [illegible] amazingly simple and yet so genuinely fair and interesting. And think of the rewards.

Full details of the big competition are to be printed for the first time in the Boston Sunday Advertiser of July 23, next Sunday. Be sure to get your copy of the paper and read every word about the competition. You will be astounded at the ease with which one of the big prizes may be won.

Think of it—a trip to the "Century of Progress Exposition" with all expenses paid for yourself and your parents. Or think what you could do with $100 in cold cash right now.

The whole world is talking about the "Century of Progress." A visit there is like a trip to every foreign nation, for each is represented there with magnificent displays and exhibits. And the Fun to be had. A visit, for example to "Enchanted Island," a real Fairyland transported to the World's Fair. Here all the dreams of your life come true.

Remember the competition is officially opened next Sunday and continues until August 27. It is open to all New England children between the ages of 6 and 12. The committee of judges will include prominent men and women of Greater Boston and their decisions will be final.

You have never before even dreamed of such competition. The prizes are the most alluring ever offered and the boys and girls who are declared winner will be envied by all. Place your order right now for the Sunday Advertiser and read there all the details—which are so simple and concise as to amaze and delight you, then fulfill the requirements and who knows, you may be one of the winners.

What beauty—what thrills—what a show. All for 14 New England children who will see the Century of Progress in Chicago as guests of the Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser. This trip is yours, if you are between the ages of six and 12. Read the Sunday Advertiser for details. Order your copy of the Boston Sunday Advertiser now. You cannot afford to miss this one big chance.

CHELSEA'S BAN ON CARNIVALS

There will be no more carnivals in Chelsea parks if Mayor Lawrence F. Quigley can do anything to prevent it!

In plain terms he told the park commissioner today that last week's carnival in Carter Park, for which a permit had been issued in the hope that it would raise money for one "Shoe and Stocking Fund," had not only failed to do that but had victimized citizens with games of chance.

Carnival promoters before leaving town Saturday, said that rain and police interference had killed all chance to raise any money for the needy.

"Maybe so!" snorted Quigley, "but there will be no more carnivals in public parks in Chelsea. Park commissioners, take notice!"

Elliott Silent on Possible Wedding

Chicago, July 19 (AP)—If Elliott Roosevelt decides to marry again he says he'll certainly let the people know about it. Until then he apparently intends to keep his own counsel.

He indicated this on arrival in Chicago by airplane from Nevada, where he and Mrs. Elizabeth Donner Roosevelt, Philadelphia society girl, were divorced.

Many questions concerning his reported romance with Miss Ruth Googins of Fort Worth, Tex., were asked him but he parried them.

When asked about a possible second marriage he said:

"Really you haven't given me time to ask her yet."

Young Roosevelt called at the hotel where Miss Googins was registered.

Halifax, July 19—George A. Gauvin, 68, head of the firm of Gauvin and Gentzel, photographers, is dead at his home here. He had been ill for several months.

DEATH CLUE IN GRAVE SOUGHT

Ipswich, July 19—Whether the body of Mrs. Madeline Gautreau, 52, who died last January, will be exhumed, is to be decided this weekend by Dist. Atty. Hugh A. Cregg of Essex county.

As soon as a lull comes in the Costello murder trial Cregg will listen to a report by State Detective William J. Murray who, with Police Chief Edward Blauvelt of this town, questioned two persons yesterday.

Chief Blauvelt asked an investigation by a state detective after information was given him of what might be considered suspicious circumstances, he said. Mrs. Gautreau was the wife of Michael Gautreau, owner of a tourist camp on the turnpike.

Gautreau, who occupied a camp adjoining that in which his wife lived, said he found her body on the floor, and the shock of her death was so great he became unconscious. When he recovered he called Dr. Francis E. Collins, who had been attending his wife.

What kind of leaf tobacco is best for pipes..how should pipe tobacco be made

a sensible package 10 cents

TOBACCO to smoke right in a pipe has to be a different kind of leaf tobacco from what is used in cigarettes, and it has to be made by an entirely different process.

OUT in Kentucky there grows a tobacco called White Burley that is found nowhere else in the world.

There is a type of this White Burley tobacco that is best suited for pipe smoking. It is not light and chaffy, at the same time it is not rank or raw. U. S. Type No. 31 is the Government classification for White Burley.

Since no other pipe tobacco has yet been found which seems to equal White Burley, this leaf tobacco is what we use in making Granger Rough Cut. Then the next step after we select the right leaf tobacco is the question of making pipe tobacco out of it.

In making Granger we use a method discovered by Mr. J. N. Wellman back in 1870, because no process has yet been invented that seems to be as good.

White Burley is the best leaf tobacco for pipes, and Wellman's Method is the best way to make pipe tobacco.

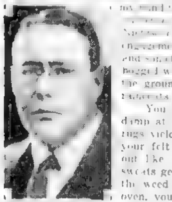
Belated Sun Tickles Dog, Too; Balbo's Feat Unparalleled

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

Ta-ta-ta desde,
Ta-ta-ta doun
Here comes the sun'

BY THE TIME this is printed it may be raining, sailing or snowing, but this morning the sun was high and wide and handsome and hot. And about time too! I had just about made up my mind that on the principle of eternal re[illegible] [illegible] it was about time for the return engagement of the famous year of 1826 and something when the roads were all bogged with rain and the potatoes froze in the ground and the corn sprouted rubber [illegible].



R. E. ROGERS

You expect your sheets to be a little damp at the seashore. But when the rag rugs yield like wet moss to the foot, and your felt bedroom slippers can be wrung out like a sponge, and your tobacco jar sweats gently and it is impossible to ignite the weed without drying it out in the gas oven, you begin to suspect you have had a spell of weather.

But here comes the sun!

I'm One of Those Sitting Gardeners

Outside the young expert from the Essex Agricultural School, who "does" the garden and lets us know his disapproval when we do fool things with it, is down on his knees over the beds trying to dry them out and replace the rotted out plants with something more likely to grow. The Missus and I love flowers, but we prefer to tend them standing up or better still, sitting down. But apparently the only way to get results out of flowers is to hover over them, kneeling, get your face down into them, regardless of housemaid's knee or any other difficulties either lumbar or iliacal.

The dog, which has spent all the past month crouched close under an old sweater, with a "what-a-perfectly-impossible climate!" look on her usually meek muzzle, is out on a dry spot, baking herself dry. The long "feathers" of her coat, there is a cocker spaniel somewhere in her ancestry with a bar sinister—are beginning to curl again after four or five weeks of lankness. Once more, her look seems to say, life is mildly endurable.

And we get a letter from Cousin Alice, in Chicago, that last week the thermometer reached a hundred every day and the week before it hit 90 consistently. And we get another letter from a traveling friend of the family that it is impossible to stir out of the hotel before 4 o'clock in the afternoon, unless you wish to get sunstruck seeing the Fair. But since there have been days during the past week when even sunstroke would have been worth taking a chance on, as a relief from long, gray, foggy, coolish autumn days, we merely say "Oh, yeah!" and make bets on how soon the new-born sun will hit 80 in the mercury tube.

Feat of Armada Without an Equal

I am glad for the sake of Balbo and the Italian flyers that it is still hot in Chicago. The spaghetti may be amateurish and the chianti lacking altogether for the 90 heroes of the flight, but at least the temperature will be homelike. If they had landed anywhere north of Boston I suspect they would have wanted to turn right around and go home.

The more one thinks of their exploit the more important it becomes. All the daring solo flights, from Lindbergh's to Post's, sink into relative insignificance when one considers the meaning of this well-organized and safely executed air maneuver by a squadron of 24 planes and nearly one hundred men. For the past decade we could applaud each single exploit and then shrug our shoulders, thinking to ourselves: "After all, it doesn't mean anything practical, either for passenger transportation or for war."

But now that it has been done once, it can be done again. I foresee France trying it out, and England, and even Germany, each with a larger squadron of aircraft and, perhaps, making fewer stops and longer hops. All in the utmost friendliness, you understand, and all for international goodwill and the improvement of the science of flying.

It makes you think, though, all the same.

The English like to believe that they are the adventurers and explorers of the world, par excellence. But before Drake and Frobisher there were Christopher Columbus (who some think was a Jew) and Amerigo Vespucci. And wasn't Cabot an Italian too? I fancy so. Do not the Italians hold the record for airplane racing? Certainly the present exploit reminds us of the days when the Italian and Portuguese vessels covered the unknown waters of the old and new world. And their ancestors, like as not, ventured past the Pillars of Hercules, which we call Gibraltar, and swept down the coast of Africa and up the coast of Europe to the tin islands, and may have traded with Atlantis before she sunk into the sea.

Without question the most important news event of this July—and one that gleams like a torch that no rain or fog can quench.

The others made their way to the island from where they were rescued later by the Point Allerton coastguard.

2 OTHER PARTIES SAVED

On their way back the coastguardsmen went to the assistance of two other distressed boating parties. Two Quincy youths, Harold Rogers and Leo Maloney, drifting in a disabled motorboat were taken in tow. Miss Mary Farnham and Vernon Bell, also of Quincy, who had lost their paddle from a canoe, were assisted to safety.

4 Injured in Accidents at Beaches

An investigation was under way today into four accidents caused by broken glass and a heavy floating object believed to be a nail studded log, which occurred at City Point and Savin Hill beaches yesterday where thousands thronged to escape the heat.

Richard Murphy, 28, of 12 Domris st., Dorchester, was stunned when his head struck the floating object which was partially submerged at Savin Hill beach. He reached shore and was taken by police of the Fields Corner station to City Hospital, where he was treated for a severe scalp wound and injury to his left elbow.

At City Point Melvin Cohen, 18, of 157 Intervale st., Roxbury; Joseph Pinkofsky, 20, of 48 Hansborough st., Dorchester, and Ruth Mahler, 12, of 98 Westminster st., Back Bay, cut their feet stepping on broken glass. All were taken to City Hospital for treatment and then sent home.

RUN-OFF PLEA SEEMS DOOMED

Efforts for a run-off primary in Boston's coming municipal election seemed doomed to disappointment with the report that the legislative committee on cities would today report against the proposal of Gov. Ely, in a special message, for such action.

The measure is expected to be defeated by a straight party vote with Republicans reporting against the measure and Democrats dissenting from the majority report and planning to carry the battle to the floors of the two legislative branches.

It is understood Democrats are counting on another successful fight for the measure in the lower branch, where a similar bill was passed early in the year to be killed in the Senate. It is said, however, that some help from Republican senators is hoped for this time on the measure.

MILITARY RITES FOR MORAN

Full military honors will be accorded John A. "Jack" Moran, federal aircraft inspector, when the funeral is held today at Holy Cross Cemetery, Malden.

Moran, whose home was at 78 Reservoir st., Cambridge, was killed Saturday at Wilmington, Del., when a plane he was testing exploded in mid-air and plunged into the Delaware river.

Four planes from the Army Air Corps detachment at Boston Airport will circle the cemetery in "blank file" formation during the services. One space in the formation will be vacant in tribute to Moran.

Moran was a member of the Air Corps reserve, holding the rank of captain. He is survived by his wife and two children, who reside in the Reservoir st., Cambridge, home.

Honorary bearers include: Capt. Robert Nagel, Lieuts. Horace White, William Harrison, Joseph Mulligan, Windsor Harlow, Harry Copland, Crocker Snow and Maurice Connell.

Malden Chamber of Commerce is holding its annual outing today at the Stow Country Club. A motorcade of autos bearing Malden business men to the number of 200 made the trip to Stow.

Strap Specialist Needed, Says Judge

When parents of Eugene L. [illegible], 18 years, of Somerville, suggested that perhaps the boy should be examined by a brain specialist as a result of stealing from St. Clement's church, Medford, in which parish he attends school, Judge Lebridge G. Davis replied that he believed it would be better for the boy to consult a strap specialist as to the toughest kind of a strap to use upon him.

There were two counts of theft against him, the sum totaling $9. The boy was placed on probation to Oct. 17th with the provision that he earn sufficient money in the meantime to make restitution to Rev. Thomas F. McCarthy, pastor of the church.

Building Upswing Seen Through State

An upswing in building in Massachusetts cities and towns is noted in the total value of building permits filed in June in 55 cities and larger towns which for the first time in months, exceeded the total for the corresponding month a year ago.

The improvement over June, 1932, was only about 3 per cent but builders declare it shows the slump of previous months has been checked.

Meeting Adjourns

Only three of the ten members making up Everett's school committee assembled as a result of the call for a special meeting last night, so the meeting adjourned to next Monday night.

HARD WORK, BUT SOME PLAY

YOUNG ROOSEVELT LOVES HIS PONY

SWINGS MEAN MALLET AT POLO

John Roosevelt, youngest son of the President, has a new deal all his own. He is trying to be different. Thus he is endeavoring to become a full-fledged polo player while working at a Whitefield, N. H., polo ranch. Above he is shown with his polo pony ready for the day's fray in the White Mountain region. The Roosevelt determination again comes to light, as shown below, where young John is pictured swinging a mean mallet. In one of the chukkers he slipped the ball away from John Morrison, son of a New York banker. With a quick stroke Roosevelt shot the ball for a perfect goal. (International News Photos.)

Economic Flower Bed New Public Gardens Feature

Boston's Public Gardens will present a new [illegible] "Economic Bed," which will contain 34 different plants from all parts of the world, each plant providing some particular need of man.

Park department employes have already started the construction of the "economic bed," which will be located on the corner of the main walk of the gardens, running from the Washington statue to the gate at Arlington and Boylston sts.

Arrangements have been made to label each of the plants and signify its use. It is expected that police will be compelled to exercise particular care to keep Common habitues away from the Jamaica ginger, the vanilla bean, the ti plant and the American aloe, all of which are used in the manufacture of spirituous liquors.

MEDFORD BACKS LOAN STAND

Mayor John H. Burke's proposal that Medford borrow $266,000 from the state fund to care for public welfare and soldiers' relief was endorsed 104 to 43 by citizens at a "town meeting" in the Medford high school auditorium last night.

The meeting, which was attended by about 300, was called for the purpose of discussing the proposed loan and getting the sentiment of voters on the question, which is scheduled to come before the board of aldermen for action next Friday.

Wrecker Offers to Take Old Tower

While bids opened some time ago for the removal of the old standpipe on Waitt's Mount, Malden, asked a minimum of $1200 for the removal of the old water tower, Mayor John D. Devir has received an offer from a wrecking company to remove the tower without cost to the city in return for the metal in it. As a result, a movement is under way to demolish the long disused tower, a Malden landmark.

Crowell Promises Somerville Tax Cut

A campaign to bring about "honesty and sincerity in municipal government" with a detailed program of reform with a $25 tax rate as its goal was announced by Alderman Percy R. Crowell, of Somerville, in presenting his name as a candidate for mayor of that city.

MISSING MAN BACK HOME

Rufus E. Lord, 81, of Hammond st., Waltham, retired banker and former alderman, was located in Bear Hill rd., that city, early today, after being missing since 3 p. m. yesterday, when he disappeared from a picnic.

Police took him to his home, where he is in the care of a physician, suffering from exhaustion. He told police he left the picnic for a walk in the woods and apparently became a victim of amnesia.

He wandered about in the woods and eventually came to Bear Hill rd. where he went to sleep in the doorway of the home of Frank H. Woodbury. He awoke shortly before 5 a. m. in full possession of his faculties again and realized he did not know where he was. Later, police were notified.

A large detail of police and some 30 Boy Scouts spent a large part of the night, searching over Prospect Hill with floodlights in a hunt for the then missing man. Their inability to find any trace of him led to fear for his safety until he finally was located early today.

Science Says the Four Minute Mile Is Within Reach ↕ Prof Kennelly Of Harvard Has Made Long Study

By AUSTEN LAKE

The nodding acquaintance which sport and science have had with each other previously seems to be ripening into a new and beautiful friendship. The other day when Primo Carnera crashed his 10-pound fist against Jack Sharkey's lower maxillary, science explained to sport that Primo owed his championship to a little, reddish gland the size of a hazel nut that lies at the base of his brain and which since childhood had been over active.

"How I would love to operate on that fellow," a surgeon remarked to me recently.

And just before Carnera sailed to his homeland he received a cable from a Milan institute politely requesting, in event of his death, that he deed it his body and brain for examination. Not, of course, that the Italian medicos expected Carnera's light to be snuffed out in the immediate future, only, since he had to die sometime, they hoped to have prior claim to his cadaver. They were willing to wait.

And this morning, relative to Jack Lovelock's record-breaking mile (4:07.6) at Princeton, Prof. A. B. Kennelly of Harvard's School of Engineering showed me a sheaf of mathematical charts and formulas which he says proves without much doubt that a four-minute mile is within reach of human legs.

"If we could breed humans like horses, for speed," said the professor, who is a pleasant, gray-haired man in his middle sixties, "I could even come close to telling you when that four-minute mile would happen."

* * *

"Man Reached Limit In Short Distances"—Kennelly

That, certainly, is cutting things fine. But science does things that way and could drill a hole in a gnat's whisker if it chose. So it is not surprising that Prof. Kennelly can make logarithms, which are wilder than weasels to most people, sit up and whinney.

Now the curious thing is that, although Prof. Kennelly had virtually no first hand experience in athletics during his own boyhood ("a little romping like any other schoolboy"), his hobby has been to chart world records in track, rowing, swimming, etc., at the point where the proper time-line intersects the proper distance line. It is done with the same finnicky care that Freddy Cochrane, state golf handicapper, spots off the records of his flock after each tournament.

Ask Freddy what any obscure golfer's ability is at the moment and he will haul out a chart much like Prof. Kennelly's, and run his fingernail to a tiny dot.

"There it is," he will say, "Anthony Chizzlehorst, handicap 18. Took 112 in the Essex four-ball last week." And you can bank on it.

"See that median," said Prof. Kennelly, tracing a hair-line that ran between the little dots that represented records, spotted neatly for time and distance. "That is man's approximate limitation according to what he has done so far. From it I gather that he has reached his limit in the distance from 100 yards to 440, but in the longer races he still has a leeway."

He bent over, searching the plan with a small magnifying glass, suddenly pointing it handlewise at a black dot.

"There," he said, "is the mile before Lockwood made his new time. Four-nine, by the Frenchman, Ladoumegue. Notice that it is about nine seconds away from the median, which shows the probable human limitation."

The Kennelly Theory of Running the Mile

Well, it is novel. Particularly since track coaches around Boston have been divided into two schools of thought, the pros, who think a four-minute mile possible, and the cons, who don't. But I doubt that Prof. Kennelly is concerned with the coaches' opinions, based as they are on the physical equation. For 27 years ago, when he published his first treatise on the subject under the title of "Approximate law of Fatigue in Speeds of Racing Animals" (it dealt with racing men too, though they did not get into the title) he showed it to some of the coaches. But being a headstrong set, wise in their own conceits, they snorted and passed on.

"It didn't mean anything to them," said the professor, smiling a little sadly.

"Of course track coaches seldom go out for records. They are satisfied to win," I said feeling that such was the flaw in the professor's theory.

"That's a mistake," he answered. "Take a mile race. The system is to run all out for the first three quarters and finish the last quarter on nerve?"

"That's right," I said, recalling the battle plan as Oscar Hedlund, old mile champion and present coach at Technology, explained it lately.

"Well," said the professor, "Science has proved that a man burns up his energy nine times faster when he sprints, than when he runs at a steady gait. The sensible thing is to find your highest average speed, and divide it evenly over the entire distance."

"Suppose the other fellow sprints and opens up a long lead?" I suggested.

"Let him," said the professor. "Let him. Suppose we take two runners of even abilities. Let one tear out from the gun on the old plan and spurt ahead. I'll back the man who travels the even pace over the full distance. He'll win every time."

Nurmi Runs on Schedule

Of course, there was Nurmi, the finnicky Finn who systematically antagonized folk wherever he ran and yet who withal, was the greatest middle distance man in the history of track. Nurmi followed that system. For Boston track followers are quite familiar with the sight of Nurmi, running with a stop watch clutched in his fist and glancing at it with a flourish to assure himself that he was on schedule each time he passed the starting line. And Nurmi's pace was quite in keeping with the Kennelly theory, the same shuffling gait from beginning to end, with scarcely any "kick" in the stretch.

"The big problem," continues the professor, "is to develop the timing sense in your men. I have in mind a mechanical device . . ."

And he explained a principle that is similar to the mechanical rabbit, now used at greyhound tracks as a decoy for the snake-hipped animals. Only my understanding is that the greyhound is a beast of very low intelligence and often quite daffy from the hard routine of his life, while the college man is too shrewd, on the average, to go shagging after what he can easily recognize as a snare and a delusion.

Gamecock Finds the Going Rough as Grid Trick Gives King Don Mat Margin

All his mat wrestling finesse didn't help Challenger Henri DeGlane as Champion Ed Don George conquered at the Wigwam in the great Boston Evening American Christmas Basket Fund match. George, a capable citizen of these United States, figured a neat football flying tackle would keep the crown safe for democracy. It did. Left, DeGlane takes Don for a ride. But right, Don's flying tackle thrust is about to dent Henri. Crash! "Oof!" and Henri goes down. A gathering of 20,000 saw the bustling match, hailed as the greatest ever staged in Boston.

DEGLANE BOWS TO GEORGE IN GREAT MATCH

By JACK CONWAY

[illegible] George [illegible] the prestige of the American wrestlers when he successfully defended his world's heavyweight championship against the terrific drive of Henri DeGlane before 20,000 persons at Braves Field.

George gained the only fall of the match in 1 hour 21 minutes 33 seconds. He used his famous flying tackle to pin the Frenchman. Previous to cutting loose with the tackle George had shaken DeGlane up with a reverse back fall.

It was the greatest wrestling bout ever staged in Boston. There was not a dull moment in the entire contest.

One fall decided the bout [illegible] American Association rules after neither wrestler was able to count with a fall inside of an hour.

George entered the ring with the crowd booing him. When he left the ring in victory he was followed by the cheers of the fans. The public was glad an American had won.

DON CAGEY IN CLASH

Don used better judgment than he has in any of his previous mat contests. He did not take the wild, reckless chances that have caused his defeat in some of his previous engagements here.

It is likely [illegible] signed to meet either Jim [illegible] ing or Jumping Joe Savoldi in a Boston ring as a result of his victory over DeGlane.

DeGlane will return to France where he will be married. He may not return to this country until late in the fall. Defeat was a bitter [illegible] for DeGlane to swallow [illegible] anxious to [illegible] as champion.

George is one of the few American champions who has been able to [illegible] off the foreign challengers [illegible] year. His [illegible] probably will make him the most popular wrestler [illegible] we have had since the palmy days of Frank Gotch.

HENRI WEIGHS 220, DON 212

DeGlane, his skin tanned as a result of outdoor training, weighed 220 pounds when he entered the ring. George, in perfect condition, was at 212 pounds. I do not believe any two athletes ever entered competition in better physical condition.

Referee Sam Smith gave the men instructions and they came out at a rapid clip. George was fast and daring, yet he didn't leave openings in his defense as he has in the past. DeGlane made his big effort in the early part of the match with arm locks. He clamped on several hammerlocks but George broke clear of them.

George suddenly shifted to a cradle hold. He punished the Frenchman severely, and made Henri try to get away by pulling himself toward the ropes. George had sufficient strength to pull DeGlane away from the ropes. Henri kept trying to get under the ropes and was finally successful in [illegible] so.

DON THRILLS FANS

George furnished the crowd a thrill when he clamped on a Japanese arm lock. He stretched DeGlane's [illegible] while he used the Frenchman's body to brace his feet. It took DeGlane three minutes to break this hold.

At the 40m. mark George missed a tackle, and crashed through the ropes to the apron of the ring. When Don got back into position When Don got back into action DeGlane dropped him with an arm lock. George broke the hold after a hard tussle.

George missed with a wild tackle but covered up perfectly when he hit the canvas.

George nailed DeGlane with a back fall. By a wonderful exhibition of strength Henri raised himself to his feet and broke the hold.

Just before the hour mark DeGlane clamped on an arm lock. He tried to turn it into a hammerlock but GeoGrge broke the hold.

Ed cut loose with three vicious flying tackles. The Frenchman was [illegible] to keep [illegible] into [illegible] tremendous pressure. [illegible] escaped and rolled under the ropes until he got his bearings.

HENRI HURLS BACK GEORGE

DeGlane [illegible] his back [illegible] feet after [illegible] DeGlane [illegible] was [illegible] the early stages of [illegible].

George [illegible] plunge across the [illegible] he knocked to the [illegible] clenched fists.

During a mixup [illegible] DeGlane's nose was [illegible] and the claret began to flow.

DeGlane kept knocking George down when the latter [illegible] sky-rocketing across the [illegible] upon scoring a flying [illegible].

Henri punished George with a hammerlock. George [illegible] desperately and finally [illegible] the ropes. Don [illegible] several before [illegible] ring.

At the 1h. [illegible] clamped on a [illegible] and twisted Don's le[illegible] up around his neck. George [illegible] clear of the hold, turned [illegible] over with a back fall, then [illegible] the Frenchman with a [illegible] flying tackle. It was a [illegible] ending to a marvelous match.

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

[illegible] probably thinking of Marty McManus' recent "hit or you're fired" order when he cracked his home run into the right field stands in the [illegible].

Sox, however, couldn't do anything with the offerings of Pearson and Harder. Pearson pitched a fine game, and would have gone the distance if it had not been for a flare-up of nerves.

Browning Keeps Active

Frank [illegible] from Los Angeles [illegible] Jim Browning made a hit with Coast wrestling fans. Browning got his Eastern start in Boston, then went to New York where he defeated Strangler Lewis. The latter was recognized as world's champion in New York and Browning took over his honors.

Browning is considered one of the greatest wrestlers of recent years. The fact Jim Londos has never [illegible] a challenge to meet him in New York [illegible] the Greek [illegible] Jim [illegible]

[illegible] me Browning is prepared to take on the various mat champions one after the other and is confident he would come through such a series of contests undefeated.

Magic Coin Picks 7 Wigwam Victors

Jack Conway's famous Magic Coin missed out when Ed Don George won from Henri DeGlane at Braves Field, but it picked the winners in seven bouts. The Savoldi-Lutze bout did not count in the final rating. The Coin picked Savoldi but that bout was an unfinished contest. Both men were knocked cold. The Black Secret licked Charley Hansen, John Kazanjian upset Benny Ginsberg, Charley Strack won from Boris Demetroff, Count Zarynoff disposed of Joe Kujot, Len Macaluso edged Pat Reilly, Earl McCready toppled Man Mountain Dean, and Panther Joe Malcewicz beat Bob Russell, all as the Coin predicted.

Seven victories out of eight finished contests isn't so bad for one evening. The Magic Coin should hop up to Rockingham and pla ythe mutuel machines. The coin's 1933 record:

ALICE BRIDGES IN TITLE SWIM

New York, July 19 (INS)—The nation's speediest mermaids took [illegible] tuning up today for the national outdoor A. A. U. swimming championships, which start at Jones beach tomorrow.

Principally because Helene Madison and Georgia Coleman have entered the professional ranks several titles will change hands. Lenore Kight, Homestead, Pa., [illegible] is picked to take over Miss Madison's [illegible] championship and [illegible] an excellent chance to capture the three other free style titles—the 100-meter, 440-yard and 880-yard events. Katherine Rawls, 15-year-old Miami Beach, Fla., [illegible] will defend the latter two [illegible].

Little Miss Rawls also will compete against Dorothy Poynton of Pasadena, Cal., Olympic high dive champion on the springboard. On the platform Miss Poynton will [illegible] as her chief rival Mrs. Helen Meany, former champion, who is returning to competition after four years of retirement.

PACED SERIES AT BIKE TRACK

Motor paced racing will be the [illegible] of the night of bike racing at the new Revere cycle track tonight. American and foreign riders will furnish an international air to the competition.

Races will be run in 10-mile heats with a 10-mile final. Al Crossley, winner of the Golden Wheel race last Saturday, matches Mike De Fillipo of Italy.

Johnny Gallo of Revere celebrates his senior motor pace debut in a race with Rene Boogmans. Charlie Winter and Felix Lefenetre compete in the third heat.

Quincy, Ill.—Al Stillman, St. Louis, knocked out Joe Lehman, Toledo (1); Allen Matthews, St. Louis, outpointed Luther Rozan, Quincy (8); Ellis Bradley, Quincy, outpointed Steve Marte, St. Louis (8); Earl Martin, Kirksville, Mo., outpointed K. O. Miller, Toledo (6).

Sioux City, Ia.—Battling Nelson, Belgrade, Neb., won on a foul from Johnny Martin, Sioux Falls (8); Young Miller, Sioux City, outpointed Red Stanley, Portland, Ore. (4).

Des Moines—Louis (Lefty) Mays, Sioux City, knocked out Irish Jack Kennedy, Fresno, Cal. (5).

Los Angeles—Gorilla Jones, Akron, outpointed Wesley Ketchell, Portland, Ore. (10).

Savoldi, Lutze Kayoed in Plunge From Ring

The question of wrestling supremacy between Jumping Joe Savoldi and Nick Lutze is still unsettled. Their Wigwam go, semi-final to the George-DeGlane bout, was declared an unfinished contest after 36m. 20s. of battling.

At the time both men were on the ground unconscious, having crashed through the ropes during a wild mixup along the ropes.

After 13m. of wrestling, Savoldi scored with a terrific arm lock. Lutze finally shook clear by throwing Jumping Joe with a back fall. He followed this up with a series of heal locks which staggered Savoldi. The former Notre Dame star then sent Lutze back against the ropes with a vicious flying tackle.

Lutze later evened up matters with Savoldi by clipping him with a cradle hold. Nick applied tremendous pressure to Jumping Joe's [illegible] section and rolled him around the ring.

At the 25m. mark Lutze sent Savoldi to the canvas with his famous reverse back fall, but Jumping Joe broke clear after hitting the canvas.

Back on his feet Savoldi dropped Lutze with two Notre Dame drop kicks, but Lutze came up off the floor. During a wild surge, Savoldi went through the ropes and landed on the ground. He was more cautious when he got back into the ring.

BOTH MATMEN KAYOED

The action speeded up. Jumping Joe finally drove Lutze back against the ropes. During a wild mixup, both wrestlers crashed through the ropes. They hit the ground with terrific force. Each was knocked cold.

Referee Charley Donnell gave them a slow count of ten, but he could have counted to 100. He then declared it an unfinished contest. The time was 36m. 20s.

The Black Secret continued his long run of victories when he won from the veteran Charley Hansen of Sweden in 14m. 5s. Hansen surrendered when the Black Secret had him helpless from a toe hold.

My guess is that the Black Secret is some youngster who has played college football. He is an expert at tripping his opponent, while he is exceptionally fast. The Black Secret has been well schooled in wrestling, and knows every hold.

McCREADY TOSSES DEAN

Earl McCready, hailed by wrestling experts as the most brilliant youngster to blast his way to the front since Frank Gotch came roaring up the mat trails, furnished the crowd with a tremendous thrill when he lifted Man Mountain Dean in the air with an inside crotch hold and then slammed him to the canvas.

McCready moved in quickly and scored with another inside crotch hold. He spun the Man Mountain around and then whacked him to the canvas, scoring the fall in 3m. 23s.

Panther Joe Malewics was obliged to exhibit all of his amazing speed and knowledge of wrestling holds to win from the rough and ready Bob Russell of Newport in 16m. 56s.

John Kazanjian of Stanford University knocked off Benny Ginsburg of New York in 8m. 54s. with a hammer throw.

The colorful Len Macaluso used a butt and flying tackle to put Pat Reilly of Texas out of commission in 12m. 3s.

Boris Demitroff of Kentucky is a pretty tough hombre, but he found that Charley Strack of dear old Oklahoma is in a class by himself at this style of warfare. Strack won in 5m. 55s., using a combination hip and headlock to put the opposition out of commission.

Count Zarynoff used a double arm scissors to win from Joe Kujot of Montreal in 12m.

BENCH AND BAR GOLFERS PLAY

Members of the Bench and Bar will fraternize tomorrow on the Pine Brook Valley golf links as the barristers engage in their second tournament of the current season.

The response to the invitation of the Pine Brook Valley Club has been great.

More than 200 members of the Bench and Bar Golf Society have entered. The first tournament held at Wollaston two weeks ago had 50 members starting.

The tournament will be an 18-hole medal competition and a dinner will be served in the clubhouse followed by speeches by several judges. Francis Ouimet also will speak.

Entries may be made with James F. McDermott, clerk of the Superior court, and with Andrew J. Gorey, 70 Franklin st., Boston.

McMANUS GOES TO FIRST TO BRACE RED SOX

1-RUN LOSSES BLOW TO HOPES FOR SEASON

By DAVID F. EGAN

The Red Sox are [illegible] one-run games.

It seems that the teams at the top have the habit of winning the close ones. The teams at the bottom, or close to the bottom, have the disastrous habit of losing them.

I am sitting in the grandstand watching the [illegible] sweep off the infield [illegible] nothing in particular when Hugh Duffy steps up [illegible] and [illegible] his straw hat [illegible] on his head.

"It is great pitching," says I, "or it is lousy hitting."

The Red Sox, if you wish to know, have been in a deep slough of hitting. They have been in the slag. But what commentator knows whether or not it is poor hitting or swell pitching?

"The fellow," says Mr. Duffy, meaning Monte Pearson, "didn't seem to have so much. He was just throwing them in th[illegible], and our fellows weren't hitting them. Those batting slumps go on for a while."

PEARSON HAS SIGN ON SOX

"The same fellow," interrupted Phillip Troy, the debonaire secretary of the Red Sox, "beat us out in Cleveland. He's like Ferrell. You wouldn't think that Ferrell had a thing, but he happens to.

"In fact"—and he draped his legs over the back of one of those green chairs that clutter the ball park—" he is one of the finest right handers in the American League, if he isn't the finest."

"Well, mebbe so," mused Mr. Duffy, "mebbe so. It's a strange game, this baseball, a very strange game. We go on the Western trip, and if we don't score a dozen runs, we are a flock of bums. We get back to Boston, and our pitchers have to shut out the other team to win a ball game."

Brown pitched himself a nice game of baseball yesterday—Lloyd Brown, the slim southpaw whose left leg is shorter than his right, but Pearson pitched an even better one. He allowed our boys only four hits, a homer by J. Smead Jolley in the third, a one-baser by Dusty Cooke in the fourth, a [illegible] single by "Little Man" Warstler in the sixth, and another one-baser by Johnny Hodapp in the seventh.

The expected shift in the Red Sox lineup has come. Marty McManus, the fightingest manager in either of the big leagues, will go to first base today and send Bob "Suitcase" Seeds to the bench.

JOLLEY SAVES BERTH

The J. Smead has not been busting them in the style to which the clients are accustomed. He parked a home run into the right field stands yesterday, however, and smacked another one which chased Joe Vosmik up the left field bank.

He saved himself a job by his clouting, and will remain in left field at least temporarily.

"I want to put more pep into the team," said McManus this morning. "A team that loses the close ones is a team that winds up behind the eight ball. Our fellows haven't been hitting for the last week. We miss Dale Alexander. Jolley hasn't been hitting when the hits counted, and neither has Seeds.

"So I'm going out there myself, and give them the good old college try," said Marty. Which is eminently satisfactory to one and all, for Mister McManus plays as neat a game around first base as he does around third.

Eastern Wins 1st Race in North Shore Finals

By E. B. SCHRIFTGIESSER

Miss Marion Leesen, captain of the Eastern Yacht Club junior crew, today won the first race in the finals for the North Shore championship.

Sailing over an eight-mile [illegible] course Miss Leesen beat the other three finalists by about three minutes at the finish.

The Pleon Yacht Club crew was second, Corinthian was third, and Eastern Point trailed home in last place.

The juniors had a light south wind and a smooth sea for the race.

PLEON FIRST ACROSS LINE

Capt. George Poor got his Pleon boat across the line first at the start. Corinthian was in second place and Capt. Benjamin A. Smith immediately tacked off shore. Poor kept him covered for a while, then took a hitch to wait [illegible] and to cover the other two boats.

This maneuver proved a mistake and both the Corinthian and Eastern racers passed the Pleon boat by the time they rounded the weather mark.

On the next leg, which was a reach to Pigs Rock, Miss Leesen slipped past Corinthian to take the lead.

Running home, Pleon and Corinthian got into a luffing match which enabled Miss Leesen to increase her advantage. After a keen fight Capt. Poor got past Capt. Smith to windward and took [illegible] from Corinthian [illegible].

[illegible] of the regatta and [illegible] Corinthian Yacht Club this afternoon the second race of the [illegible] finals has been deferred until tomorrow morning.

RACING MARKS SHIFTED

The Eastern Yacht Club again this year is having trouble in keeping the racing marks off Marblehead in their proper positions. This week [illegible] Gray, chairman of the E. Y. C. race committee, has [illegible] Marks B and [illegible] [illegible] two [illegible] It is supposed that [illegible] in darkness [illegible] their [illegible] them out of place.

The [illegible] and westerly winds which the juniors have had for their races have been almost the first [illegible] that quadrant this season. Easterlies have prevailed almost without interruptions since before the Fourth.

Marion Leesen added insult to injury in her one-minute victory in the [illegible] preliminary junior race. She [illegible] down her boat by allowing her crew to tow over [illegible] to which were attached bottles of ginger ale to be cooled in Marblehead's Arctic sea water.

KILLEFER QUITS AS BROWNS' MANAGER

St. Louis, July 19 (AP)—Bill Killefer, manager of the St. Louis Browns, telegraphed his resignation from Washington today. President Phil Ball announced Al Sothoron, who has been coach, would act as manager temporarily.

President Ball, who is in a hospital, said he would take steps to obtain a new manager when he is released in a few days.

Ball had no comment on Killefer's resignation but it has been no secret that he was displeased with the showing of the Browns, who are in last place in the American League. Ball announced last Saturday that Killefer was through as far as signing players or formulating plans for the Browns is concerned.

Both Ball and Killefer at that time denied reports that Killefer would manage the Boston Red Sox in 1934. Ball said that Boston had not asked permission to deal with Killefer as would be necessary under league rules.

COAST STARS WIN AT ESSEX

Manchester-by-the-Sea, July 19—Little short of an earthquake will prevent an All-California semifinal in the Essex Invitation singles, it appeared today, as eight survivors of the original field of 48 entered the quarterfinal round of play.

The West Coast comes to bat with five of the remaining eight in the tourney. Three of these five, Carolyn Babcock, Alice Marble and Josephine Cruikshank, are seedlings.

As usual, the East rests its hopes on the slim shoulders of Sarah Palfrey of Brookline, who must, by now, be getting a little sick of carrying the local interest down to the crucial rounds alone.

The girls will step down the speed with which this tournament has been run, today, in order that play in the doubles tournament, which started late, and lags in the bracket of 24 today, may catch up.

Easterners survived at the expense of other Easterners yesterday. Alice Francis, the Orange N. J., dark horse, defeated Cecilia Riegel of Philadelphia, 6—4, 1—6, 6—2, while Marjorie Gladman Van Ryn, the transplanted Californian now claiming Philadelphia as her home city, took Mrs. Ary K. Lamme out of the play, 6—3, 6—4.

Sarah Palfrey eliminated the national junior girls' champion, Helen Futon, of Winnetka, Ill., 6—2, 6—2.

"Take Things Easy," Cup Captain Warns

Paris, July 19 (INS)—Two days before the opening tilt of their interzone final match with England the members of the American Davis Cup team cut down on their practice today on the advice of their non-playing captain, Bernon S. Prentice.

Informing his men that courts would be available at Roland Garros Stadium at 5 o'clock this afternoon, Prentice said:

"Go ahead and practice if you want to, but take things easy."

Braves Can Take Road Edge in Card Series

By JOE CASHMAN

Chicago, July 19—It will be a gloomy trip to St. Louis for the Braves this afternoon.

It's always unpleasant entering the torrid heat of the Mound City at this time of year and it's doubly so for a group of ball players fretting over three defeats in a four-game series, which is the plight of our boys leaving Chicago.

The local engagement having been the first they lost since dropping three out of five to the [illegible] rates at the start of their last stand at the Wigwam early in June, the Warriors can't be blamed for being a bit depressed. But they really have no cause to be downhearted—not just yet, at any rate.

CARDS SERIES IMPORTANT

The five games in the next four days in St. Louis, which will bring this second Western trip to a close, can make the journey a success despite the setbacks at Wrigley Field.

For the Tribesmen won six games in 12 starts since leaving home and three victories over the Cards would enable them to surpass their [illegible], which is to split even out in the wide open spaces.

On the other hand, they'll have plenty of reason to moan should they drop the edge down the river in Missouri. In that event, they would at least be two games below the .500 mark starting back East to meet the Phils in Quakerville, where Klein, Hurst et al. are plenty tough.

The jinx that every visiting club has little trouble finding in Chicago, principally because they are always looking for it, was plainly visible to the Braves judging by their showing here.

In four games, they made exactly four runs. The Cubs didn't break down any fences, averaging only three runs per contest, yet they won three out of four without extending themselves.

Still, the Tribesmen did better here than the Giants, who dropped four straight.

Which gives rise to the question: Can the Cubs be halted in their spurt for their second consecutive National League pennant?

They're not likely to be, unless they collapse completely on their next and final road trip. If they are within striking distance of the peak on Labor Day, they'll have little to worry about. The remainder of their games are at home, where they are conceded wins even before the games start.

Ben Cantwell tried to halt the Grimm clan and at the same time chalk up his 13th victory of the campaign in the final game. He failed, 4 to 1, as Lonnie Warneke, native right-handed ace, was winning his 12th game.

A home run by Gabby Hartnett, his 12th, sent the Cubs off with a one-run lead in the second. Three more markers registered on three hits in the third.

Though the Braves made seven safeties, as many as the opposition, they never came close to [illegible] except in the eighth, when they put over an unearned tally.

San Francisco—Jim Browning, [illegible], Verona, Mo., tossed Richard [illegible], 220, Germany, 27:00, 4:00.

At Denver—Billy Edwards, [illegible], Kansas City, threw Joe Woods, 200, Los Angeles, two falls out of three.

Harry Demetral, 205, Los Angeles, and Tony Marconi, 198, Chicago, drew.

Jack Anderson, 205, Fort Collins, defeated Billy Murdock, 203, Shreveport, La.

Red Bullis, 145, Denver, defeated Henry Clausen, 143, Kansas City.

T CLASS RACERS ACE SKIPPERS

Tea parties and yacht races are all one to the young ladies who summer at Marblehead, especially to those able feminine skippers who sail their boats in the T class.

Most appropriately named in the group is the fast little knockabout Pekoe, owned by Anne Conant with Evelyn Young as crew. A graduate of the Brutal Beast class, youthful Miss Conant is one of the promising youthful sailormen, or sailorwomen if you prefer, of the yachting capital on the North Shore.

Class T among Marblehead's racing craft seems to be a prolific school for yachtswomen. Miss Marion Leesen, who as captain of the Eastern Y. C. junior crew today competing in the finals for the Curtis cup, was the [illegible] among some 30 boys [illegible] has more than held her own [illegible] competition. She placed [illegible] three out of four races in the [illegible] series.

There are other [illegible] in the T class among [illegible] Haskell, who [illegible] Katherine Jones [illegible] Ruth Edmands of [illegible]. Heavyweight Ring Champion

My tussle with Jose Santa was my most talked-of [illegible] that K. O. list of 1932. Known as "The Portuguese Giant," he was almost as heavy as I am, not quite as tall, and a mass of muscles.

We clashed in Madison Square Garden, on November 17, and I battered him into helplessness in the sixth round. The critics and many fans were disappointed, with [illegible] and especially with me. It was a slow battle most of the way [illegible] mauling was uninteresting.

Seldom can one stop such a strong and tough fellow as Santa with a few punches, especially when he keeps on the defense. He has to be mauled open and tired before he can be hammered down. And that is what I had to do, and end my farewell to the Garden for 1932.

Earlier in the year, I outpointed [illegible] Fiske in ten rounds at New York City and repeated in a return match with King Levinsky at [illegible].

[illegible], a promising German heavy. He was Sharkey's chief sparring partner when training, recently for his second battle with me.

That fall I ran into another defeat, this time, Stanley Poreda, of Jersey City, N. J., being called the winner at nearby Newark. It was so bad a decision that the New Jersey boxing authorities investigated and punishments were dealt out.

Before a return match could be [illegible] with Poreda he tackled [illegible] Ernie Schaaf in Madison Square Garden and was knocked [illegible] in the sixth round early in January of this year.

Early in 1933 and even before it, the heavyweight championship situation had taken a strange turn which luckily led to my crack at the title the following June.

Experts Disagree on Four-Minute Mile

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

A four-minute mile—will it ever be run by a human being?

Your humble scribe, who the winds of chance blew into one Olympic meet as a point winner, and to others as a spectator and who has seen almost every great miler since Tommy Conneff's time, believes that it will.

His opinion is shared by Dan Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the National A. A. U., who also has been looking 'em over for a con[illegible] Lawson Robertson, Olympic [illegible] George Brown, [illegible] manager of the American Olympic team, who ha[illegible] of Olympic games and countless other track meets of importance; Tom Kanaly of the Boston A. A. and others.

Bill Bingham, former middle distance star [illegible] of Harvard, and Jack Ryder, B. C. coach, who also know their athletic onions, stand in rebuttal. Here Jack on the air now—

STUNT FOR SUPERMAN

"Unless Almighty God a hundred years from now gives us a race of supermen," says Jack, "no human being ever will step a mile in 4 minutes flat. I believe Jack Lovelock, the New Zealander, who did 4.07.6 Saturday, would have run in 4.06 with a faster third quarter. I believe Lovelock can turn a mile in 4.05.

"But as far as any man doing four minutes flat that is a mark that never will be hit. Lovelock may step a mile in 4.05 or 4.06 in the meet at Hamilton, Ontario, this afternoon, or in Montreal, tomorrow. He is at a rare competitive edge. Some time some other fellow under right track, weather and competitive conditions may do 4.04. But in my opinion the world will come to an end before any runner does an actual 4 minutes."

Now let Bill Bingham take the rostrum. Bill is not quite so emphatic as Ryder. With true Harvard conservatism Bill recognizes the possibility of a 4-minute mile but decries the probability.

"NO" SAYS BINGHAM

"Lovelock is the greatest miler I ever have seen," says Bingham. "I think he may run a full second faster than he did in the world's record wrecking race in Princeton. But I do not believe that Lovelock or any other runner ever will hit the magic 4 minute mark.

"It is a coincidence that as you put the question I have on the desk before me a pamphlet by Professor A. E. Keneally of Harvard. Through years of exhaustive scientific research he sets 240 seconds as the maximum speed of a human being for a mile run. That is exactly 4 minutes.

"So I'm not going to combat science and deny the possibility of a 4-minute mile but I do decry its probability."

Now the "Nays" have had their [illegible] a few [illegible] from the ayes.

"YES" SAYS ROBERTSON

"In my short life I have seen the athletes steadily progressing under improved training, track and competitive conditions," says Lawson Robertson. "I recognize that there must be some limit of human endeavor. But I do not believe that a 4-minute mile is impossible. On the other hand I believe that some miler, and perhaps not in the too distant future, will race a mile in 4 minutes or perilously close to it."

"On as wonderfully fast a track as Los Angeles," declares George Brown, "last Saturday's race of Lovelock's would have been good for 4.04 or 4.05. I believe the time will come when we will develop a greater miler than Lovelock, and that some day, when he is at razor edge and has the benefit of weather, track and competitive conditions, that runner will race a mile within half a second either way of 4 minutes."

"It may seem fantastic," says Dan Ferris, "but under the proper conditions and particularly if it were possible to bring together the three greatest milers in the world today—Lovelock, Bill Bonthron and Glen Cunningham—I think we might see the mile run in 4 minutes flat."

"It may not be in our day or in the next generation," says Tom Kanally of the Boston A. A., "but some day, as sure as you're born, a miler will do 4 minutes. I don't think that Lovelock ever will do 4 minutes, but it is only a question of time before the greater Lovelock comes along. When he does, you will se a 4-minute mile."

Fred Walker, Yankees—Batted home five runs against White Sox with homer, double and single.

Field and Stream

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Whitefish are in Moosehead Lake. Where they came from we don't know, but Ed Whitten, the heating engineer, tells us that when fishing there recently he saw two landed.

We've never seen white fish anywhere except in the Great Lakes, particularly Lake Superior.

Years ago when lumbering in the Shawanaga and waiting on the shores of Georgian Bay for a boatload of hay three of us caught enough in a day for a fish supper for 180 lumberjacks, if you know what that means.

Not so long ago Jim Moore, proprietor of the famous Dinty Moore's restaurant in New York, told us that most of the gfeltefish his Jewish patrons love so well is made from Lake Superior whitefish.

How have the whitefish reached Moosehead? Did the government stock it? Does anyone know? Write us if you do.

Dr. Harris Lucky

Dr. Norman Harris, the Revere veterinary, and Randall Thornton of Cambridge, caught nine pickerel and a string of white perch while fishing in an East Saugus pond early this week. Dr. Harris is the noted moose hunter.

When you go fishing in the Grand Lakes, it's great to go Eric Nissen's way. The sportsman from Joseph Middleby, Jr., & Co. hops into a hydroplane right here in Boston and lands on the lake. If the fish are not biting in one lake he promptly flies to another.

Speaking of the Grand Lakes, Charlie Warmuth, the Devonshire st. restaurateur, tells of coming in catchless one day only to see the son of a guide reach in the shallow water near the landing and pull out a 13-pound laker with his naked hands. For that Charlie gets the Brown Derby!

Warmuth and George S. Hebb, the leather man, recently returned from a trip to Spencer Bay in Moosehead, where they got the limit of squre-tailed trout and salmon. About this time last year Charlie and your humble scribe were fishing for the big fellers in Hart's Island pool on the St. Johns.

Hitchman in Maine

Lionel Hitchman writes that the fish are biting like wildcats in his Maine camp and to come up. Wish we could. Every time we look out the windows we see blue waters, purple mountains and pine-clad ridges. It's the fishin' feeling.

DE MAR TIES B. U. RELAY

With the thermometer at 90 degrees, Clarence DeMar forced ten of Boston University's best track men to the limit in a special five-mile race held during the Summer Session Field Day at the Nickerson Field in Weston. DeMar finished in a dead heat with James Bouren, who ran anchor on the relay team that faced DeMar. DeMar covered the five miles in 29m. 15s.

The race was one of the events witnessed by over 1000 students. Baseball games, a tennis tournament, and aquatic events were also presented.

Professor Charles D. Giaque of the B. U. physical education faculty was in charge, assisted by Dr. John M. Harmon, Alexander Welch and Miss Eleanor Dobbins.

HEAVY MONEY FOR SANDE

New York, July 19 (AP)—Earl Sande, who foresook the saddle to train thoroughbreds, is on his way back to the top again.

After a disappointing start with the stable he assembled last fall for Maxwell Howard of Toledo, the Earl is riding the wave of prosperity and receiving the cheers of the crowds much as he did during the last 15 years when he rode to fame and fortune aboard some of America's greatest thoroughbreds.

His stable comprises only six horses, but within the short space of six days he won four races with three of them at Empire City. St. Huberts captured two events while Miss Snow and St. Stephen won one race each.

The other three, True Romance, Orphan and Resurrection, have not faced the barrier since recovering from a siege of coughing that swept the Eastern stables during the spring, but they are about ready for the races. Resurrection, once considered a Kentucky Derby prospect, probably will start at Saratoga, where with St. Stephen, he is heavily engaged in the three-year-old stakes.

Head Play Out for Summer Season

Chicago, July 19 (AP)—Head Play, which finished second in the Kentucky Derby and came back to win the Preakness as a start toward three-year-old racing honors. Probably will not run again during the summer season.

A bruised foot has thrown him out of training.

Logically there will develop a contest between those favoring domination of industry and those championing restoration of a greater measure of scope for the exercise of the qualities we have been proud to regard as characteristically American.

Which will win?

A compromise will be the natural outcome, all things considered.

After the abnormalities begotten by the crisis have served their purpose, many modifications will unquestionably be evolved.

The people will doubtless demand and bring about escape from undue dictation if imposed by Washington and tyranny if attempted by high finance and big business.

That there will ultimately be achieved a distinctly better social and economic order can reasonably be hoped counted upon.

Meanwhile moderation, toleration common sense must be exercised all round. The millennium cannot be attained in a jiffy.

Eastern Carriers to Cut Coal Rates

Eastern carriers were authorized today by the Interstate Commerce Commission to establish temporarily anthracite coal rates from Pennsylvania mines to Boston and other New England points on a basis lower than rates to intermediate points. The authority was granted pending further hearings of the case.

Continental Can Net Is Increased

Continental Can Company today reported for the 12 months ended June 30 net income of $5,131,347, equivalent to $3.13 a share on the common stock. For the previous 12-month period the company had net income of $1,401,899, or $2.54 a share.

State St. Traders Feel Patience Is Well Rewarded

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

The p[illegible] of [illegible] State streeters was more th[illegible] [illegible] They felt the [illegible] the whisky [illegible] gone and he[illegible] to [illegible] positions. The [illegible] shrewdness [illegible] view it was well rewarded [illegible] gold stocks came forward [illegible] with the utility shares which was imperative to save [illegible] from a sharp break.

No change in their stock market attitude is apparent at present. That is with one condition. First profits are being accepted [illegible] gold miners. This is not an indication of bearishness [illegible] rather [illegible] a sign of their desire to improve current trading situation. O[illegible] than that there [illegible] the doings in [illegible] circles.

Some [illegible] dutifully reported [illegible] that the good stocks were favored for reasons given for their popularity were the imminence of a free gold market or the possibility that American miners would be allowed to export the metal, thus taking advantage of the premium offered abroad.

It now seems that another fact is entering the picture. Rumors and some believe they emanate from reliable quarters are that the export of gold in an unrefined stage will be permitted. This privilege if it is granted will be a powerful stimulant to the earnings of domestic producers.

The last low-priced gold stock which was well considered by informed State St. interests, was San Antonio listed in Toronto and then selling at a slight bit over one dollar. The next favorite in this class is probably Wayside listed on the same board.

Old Gold Standard Gone, Says Blackett

The nations of the world will never again tie themselves to an international gold standard in any way comparable to that which was supposed to be in force throughout the greater part of the world up to 1930 or 1931, states Sir Basil P. Blackett, a director of the Bank of England, in his article "Sanctity of Contract and the Gold Standard," which appears in the summer issue of Economic Forum.

Sir Basil, who represented the British Treasury in the United States during the World War, approves President Roosevelt's action in legally abandoning the gold standard.

"The Englishman who applauds the action of his government in leaving the Gold Standard in September, 1931 should be the last person to condemn Mr. Roosevelt's action in April, 1933," says Sir Basil, "for now that the United States has adopted a policy of action, others, and particularly England, are bound not only to follow, but to co-operate in raising not only internal prices but world prices."

The Administration's National Industrial Recovery Act is given no such support by Virgil Jordan in his article on the Industrial Recovery Act, which appears in the same issue of Economic Forum. Mr. Jordan, the president of the National Industrial Conference Board states that opportunities for bureaucratic waste and graft, implied in the vague grants of powers under these measures, are so vast as to create the possibility of a pork barrel paradise unprecedented.

"Taken in conjunction with the Farm Act and the Securities Control Act, which are inseparable from it, it is, in fact, not a piece of legislation at all, in the usual sense of the word, but general and practically unlimited grant of power to persons largely unspecified to reorganize, control, and administer the entire economic system of the nation," says Jordan.

Secretary of Interior Ickles declared that public works program which the President has decided to carry on in full will be no "grab bag." Secretary's statement was made after a meeting of the cabinet board on public works at which it was decided to refer to careful consideration of bureau of the budget two lists of public building projects submitted by the Treasury and Postoffice departments for federal structures throughout the country.

BROKERS RAISE STOCK MARGINS

The w[illegible] ding [illegible] the stock market ha[illegible] ed brokers to raise their ma[illegible] demands drastical[illegible] it became known today.

Under the new requirements it is no longer possible to trade in any of the fast moving securities on margin of 20 or 25 per cent of total purchase prices.

The new schedules call for as high as 50 to 60 per cent, the latter applying particularly to the alcohol stocks whose gyrations in the last few weeks have been as sensational as any of the wide price swings seen during the most hectic period of the 1929 bull market.

Before the market started up in April traders were able to work on a relatively small amount of capital because of the market's very low price range.

Railroads' Buying of Steel Is Increasing

National average of steel production has declined to 58 per cent of capacity from 59 per cent a week ago, "Iron Age" reported today.

Railroad purchases of steel for gradually increasing, but the carriers are unlikely to abandon their present caution before the June and July earnings statements have been analyzed.

Output, said the review, has apparently gone about as far as it can without the support of the heavy industries, such as railroads and construction.

"Finished steel releases continue to run behind those of last month. But mill backlogs have not been materialy reduced. Pressure for deliveries is still severe particularly from the automotive industry. New demand from that source, however, has declined indicating that some of the motor car manufacturers are apprehensive of a reduction in their production schedules in August.

"Similar caution earlier in the year proved to be unwarranted and it is possible that present estimates fail to take into account current accessions to mass buying power from wage advances, increased farm prices and higher security markets.

"The adoption of a code by iron and steel producers has clarified the price situation materially, causing concessions to disappear on virtually all products and overcoming lingering consumer reluctance to accept recent advances. Establishment of a single quotation for all buyers, under the code, will wipe out preferences enjoyed by larger users and will mean higher realization prices to mills. Already buyers are hastening to enter specifications against bars, plates, shapes and other products on which prices were extended through this month."

ACCOUNTING ON EXCHANGE HAS REFORM NEED

Street critics declare that if the New York Stock Exchange in its campaign for better corporate accounting is to benefit the outside investor, it should insist on accounting which is genuinely revealing rather than on forms which are merely orthodox.

The point is illustrated by treatment of the items of plant investment and depreciation and obsolescence.

Some of the listed companies, pursuing orthodox and approved accounting methods, kept steadily adding through the years to the net figure for investment in plants. Though the figures represent a large element of opinion and managerial judgment, certainly numerous large and well-known companies carried such items on what proved to be grossly exaggerated figures in time of acute depression.

That the figures carried were unwartantably high is not merely my individual opinion, but reflected the general financial judgment as expressed by prevailing security prices. Accordingly, the shares of numerous respectable enterprises were quoted vastly below the stated book value.

Methods of drastic write-offs which seemed ultra conservative—and which were criticized as such during the new era—sometimes proved not conservative enough under the test of maximum depression conditions. Chief executives of companies, pursuing such accounting methods, agree on this.

In the settlement of the Allied Chemical-Stock Exchange row, one important innovation was instituted. Orland W. Weber, president of the industrial company, agreed to include in the annual reports a statement of the gross amount in dollars of all retirements from plant account. Few, if any, other leading company give precisely this information, and outside investors would be helped enormously if they did.

For, without knowledge of retirements and dismantlement of old plants, the investor does not know what the next gain may be in the depreciation and obsolescence reserves.

HOGAN HEADS FISK SERVICE

Thos. E. Hogan

Thomas E. Hogan, president of Thomas E. Hogan, Inc., has been elected president of the Fisk Tire Service, Inc. of Springfield, distributors of Fisk Tires in Western Massachusetts, Connecticut and Vermont. Mr. Hogan will continue as president of the Thomas E. Hogan, Inc. Mr. Hogan will have charge of distribution of Fisk Tires throughout the entire New England territory.

For some time Mr. Hogan has been recognized as the largest individual tire distributor in the world. Mr. Hogan has just returned from a trip throughout the entire New England territory and is very optimistic regarding the tire industry and Fisk in particular. "The announcement of the Fisk Company on June 1 that in the future all Fisk tires sold will be backed by the 'Fisk Guarantee Bond,' insuring the purchaser against all road hazards, has no doubt been a stimulating factor," continued Mr. Hogan.

Dollar Has a Rally; Sterling Above Par

London, July 19 (AP)—The dollar lost another 1¾ cents in the London market today and closed at $4.85½, to the pound, recovering after having crossed the old parity mark of $4.86 3-5.

Today's low for the dollar was the lowest since Great Britain quit the gold standard.

The French franc, subjected to control, closed at 85.03 to the pound compared with the overnight of 85.15. The mark was firmer at 13.96 and so was the Dutch guilder at 8.24¼.

Morton Downey Heard in Radio Return This Evening

Gen. Italo Balbo and his fleet of 21 seaplanes arrive in New York at approximately five o'clock today, and along with milling thousands, a dozen NBC microphones will greet them. The broadcast, heard locally over WEEI and WBZ, is expected to last for an hour or more. A description of the armada's entrance into the city, the landing and attendant ceremonies, will be heard.

This makes their fifth broadcast in three days. If the general and his boys aren't air weary one way, they're sure to be another way before they hit the cloud trail for home. But radio is going in strong for aviation these days. When Wiley Post reaches Edmonton, Alberta, CBS expects to put him on the air. And when Jimmy Mattern arrives home, a flock of juicy radio contracts await his signature.

Morton Downey's first microphone appearance upon his return from London will be an interview by Bob Taplinger on "Meet the Artist" heard over WAAB at 6 o'clock tonight. During the broadcast Mrs. Downey, the former Barbara Bennet, will make her network debut. Next Monday the popular tenor starts a three-a-week 7 o'clock series on CBS.

The Chicago Opera Co. performance of "Aida" at Braves Field tomorrow night will be broadcast through WAAB, starting at 8:30. The entire opera will be aired.

Views of a newspaper woman who has worked under the Soviet regime, on the question of recognition for Russia, will be given in a program heard over WEEI at 4:30 tomorrow by Miss Charmion von Wiegand, daughter of the famous European correspondent of Universal Service.

The Voice of Experience makes his last broadcast tonight, WNAC at 8, until autumn . . . Eddie Cantor just signed to return to the air Sept. 10 . . . Fanny Brice will continue to be heard Wednesday nights until Sept 10 when Bert Lahr, stage comedian, takes over her job . . . Bing Crosby is another artist due for a radio return in the fall . . . but Hollywood is treating Bing too well for him to sign with a sponsor at present . . . To listen to the smooth rhythm of Jacques Renard's orchestra over WNAC at 10:30 tonight, one would never think the Boston leader was an "also ran" in a dozen commercial auditions previous to landing his present sponsor. A friend told him to stop serving up classical pieces during auditions and immediately afterwards he clicked.

"It's Fun to Be Fooled"

IN THE case of Mrs. Mollie Carroll and Randy Thomas, the flower of romance was a gin blossom. They met at the Club Select, where Spring and the odor of stale beer are always in the air. Mrs. Carroll—pretty, petite and partly plastered—was a discontented wife. Randy—dapper, dramatic and definitely dizzy—was a singer at the club, and specialized in discontented wives. Result: Trouble.

Or maybe it wasn't trouble; maybe it was love. I don't find much difference, but that's neither here nor there. The very first afternoon that Mollie met Randy he sang eight risque songs to her in a row. On the theory, I suppose, that "nothing risque, nothing gain."

Mrs. Carroll was highly insulted and proof lies in the fact that she begged him to sing eight more.

After he had choked on his last note, proving that the choke was on him, Mollie begged him to sit down. Randy sat, although he wasn't particularly interested. Another discontented wife meant as much to him as another vote for Hoover in the last campaign.

But as the lady talked, the gentleman began to listen more attentively. Her husband was in the theatrical business, and was away most of the time. Right then, he was in Europe. More, he was an excellent provider—and Mrs. Carroll really had more money than she quite knew what to do with.

The singer asked her to repeat that last remark, and Mrs. Carroll did so. And ah, my friends, how quickly romance blossomed after that! Randy Thomas thanked his stars that one of the Mdivani brothers wasn't around that table.

At this point, I must interrupt my narrative long enough to tell you that I am skipping the events of the next few hours and the next few weeks. You know that portion of the novel where you get nothing but dots and asterisks? Well, you've just completed the very same territory in this story.

Sufficient to tell you that, by this time, Randy Thomas was singing his songs exclusively for the ears of Mrs. Mollie Carroll. I might add that he was being paid handsomely for his services, but I'd hate to go into that type of sordid detail. So you just forget I said anything about it.

Came the mourn. A cablegram from Mr. Walter Carroll to his darling wife announced the return of the darkie in the woodpile. And when Mollie showed the message to Randy, he gathered her in his arms.

"Ah, my sweets," he crooned, "how terrible it is going to be without you."

He might have added—"and your dough." But he didn't. Once a crooner, always a gentleman.

"But it's all in the game," he went on. "Our love was a pure and wonderful thing. But now that your husband is returning, I suppose it is best for us to part. Kiss me tenderly, my wonderful one, and then if you'll give me my expense account for last week, I'll pack my things and——"

Mollie placed a finger on his lips and three fingers in a glass.

"You'll do nothing of the kind, my love," she told him, "because I have an idea. No matter what happens, I am not going to lose you—but I am not going to lose my husband, either. I have an idea."

Mollie's notion, like Mollie herself, was simple. Mr. Carroll knew nothing of Mrs. Carroll's relatives, which made him a pretty lucky guy. When hubby arrived, what was to prevent Randy from being introduced as a cousin from out of town? Mr. Carroll would be in town but a short time and wouldn't have the opportunity to grow suspicious. So why not?

The singer wasn't too strong for the idea at first. Why go to all that trouble when hubby would be in town only a short time? And besides, just what kind of a theatrical producer was Mr. Carroll? He had never heard of him.

When Mr. Carroll arrived the little deal was put through. Randy Thomas was introduced as Mollie's cousin, and the husband was so nice to him that the situation was absolutely criminal. After one or two meetings, Mr. Carroll insisted that Randy move into the house with his wife and himself. He couldn't show enough hospitality, he said, to a relative who had been so courteous to his wife in his absence.

And so it went on for ten days that Mr. Carroll was in town.

"I want you to take good care of Mollie for me," stated Mr. Carroll. "I love her very dearly, and I'm happy to know that she's in such good company. Stay on as long as you can, Randy, because—even though you are a relative—she seems to like you. You will take good care of her, won't you?"

Randy nodded. He could afford to.

"That's fine," the other man went on. "It's a relief to leave her in the hands of a man I know I can trust. I only wish I could stay with her myself—but the act must go on. I play the Northwest for the next two months and then I may be booked in Australia. Who knows?"

The singer stepped back.

"You—an actor?" he queried. "I never knew that. What type of actor?"

Mr. Carroll smiled indulgently.

"Of course you didn't know, my boy," he returned proudly. "My work and my other name are hidden from everyone, and even my dear wife is forbidden to mention them. But I can tell you because your eyes tell me that you are to be trusted."

He drew himself up.

"I am the great Petruska," he said. "The world's most famous mind reader." . . .

RE-ADVERTISEMENT
CITY OF BOSTON

TRANSIT DEPT.

PROPOSALS FOR INSULATED WIRE AND CABLE FOR TRAFFIC TUNNEL

The Transit Department of the City of Boston, 1 Beacon Street, seventh floor, invites proposals from citizens of the United States and corporations or other legal associations wherein the controlling interest to the extent of at least one-half thereof is owned by a citizen or citizens of the United States, for furnishing and delivering insulated wire and cable for the Traffic Tunnel. A bond of an approved surety company will be required for the faithful performance of the contract in a sum of 45 per cent of the total bid price. Proposals must be filled out and signed by the bidder on forms to be obtained at this office, inclosed in a sealed envelope, indorsed "Insulated Wire and Cable, Traffic Tunnel," and delivered to the Department, or to its secretary, before 12 o'clock noon on Wednesday, August 2, 1933, at which time and place they will be publicly opened and read. A properly certified check in the sum of one thousand (1,000) dollars, payable to the city, must accompany the proposal. This check shall become the property of the city if the contract is not executed by the bidder within the time prescribed after the date of the notification by the Department of the acceptance of the proposal and the readiness of the contract for signature. Proposals must be made in duplicate. The sealed duplicate, without check, is to be deposited by the bidder with the City Auditor, Room 20, City Hall, previous to the time named for opening the proposals. Proposals, specifications and forms of contract may be obtained at this office on or after Thursday, July 20, 1933. The Department reserves the right to reject any or all proposals.

By order of the CITY OF BOSTON TRANSIT DEPARTMENT.

"I do not like to think," says former R. C. F. Chairman Atlee Pomerene, "what might have happened if our people had not had the Reconstruction Finance Act."

And others do not like to think what did happen after we got the Reconstruction Finance Act.

The rest of us simply do not like to think—and let it go at that.

CALM OBSERVERS ARE SKEPTICAL

(Lamar, Mo., Democrat)

There has been considerable gossip over Mary Bog, eighteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Bog, and Brown Marsh, a widower past forty. The pair disappeared Sunday. Naturally Mary's parents are upset, as they say they did not suspect any affair between Marsh and their daughter. There have been various stories circulated. But calmer observers are sure that it was a mere elopement, and they are safely married and will be back in due time to settle down to humdrum life.

The grimmest tortures yet devised
In this too, too, inventive day,
Are those by which the oversized
Attempt to melt the fat away.
A tear must wet the dryest eye,
The hardest heart must feel some ruth,
When one beholds plump matrons try
To win again the lines of youth.
What pain they'll face of trunk and limb!
It makes mere man in wonder blink
To see that from these ordeals grim
So few fat women ever shrink!

Politics, The Police, and Attorney-General Warner

ATTORNEY-GENERAL JOSEPH E. WARNER stirred the Legislature and the people of Boston by the promise he made to drive out the underworld which is responsible for the orgy of murder, banditry, racketeering and general crime in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Give to him the authority to direct the police and to raid the speakeasies and other dens of vicious crime, he said, and he will go after the big racketeers and clean out the lawless gangs.

Mr. Warner's record is so well and highly known to the people of Massachusetts that his promise would never be regarded by them as an idle boast.

Speakeasies and gambling dens are flourishing within the shadow of the State House, in the heart of Boston, he says. SURELY THE POLICE OF BOSTON KNOW THIS.

New York underworld chieftains have moved their roulette, faro and other gambling equipment here and have set up their unlawful business with armed guards at the entrances, says Mr. Warner. SURELY THE POLICE OF BOSTON KNOW THIS.

These dens and speakeasies finance the underworld in their banditry and racketeering at the expense of the law-abiding people, Mr. Warner says. SURELY THE POLICE KNOW THIS.

Mr. Warner would name the racketeers and gang-lords. He would destroy their lawless rendezvous by persistent raids. He would expose their swollen bank accounts and illegitimate profits. In one way or another he would "get" them.

"I say stamp them out. The underworld has got a grip on things and all authority is defied. The strong arm of the Commonwealth is needed to restore decency."

* * *

THESE solemn statements, which reflect the notorious conditions of crime very largely headquartered in Boston, were made by the Attorney-General, who is the Chief Law Officer of Massachusetts, before a Committee of the Legislature which gathered at the demand of the Governor of Massachusetts to probe and expose the evils.

The legislative situation is compelling in its importance.

When you have the Governor of the Commonwealth and the Attorney-General condemning the vicious situation, you can expect that the people are themselves aroused and expect unflinching action and positive results.

These legislative hearings should not permit themselves to degenerate into any political caucus for benefits of inside politickeers.

Nor should they descend into any whitewash expedition for benefit of police officials who have been deaf, dumb and blind to their duty. Already the politicians are busy and the stories are out that the probe will be just another picnic.

* * *

THE combination of politickeers and fixiteers and policeteers and racketeers must be destroyed if decency is to be restored, if police efficiency is to be regained and if the reputation of Boston is to be rescued from underworld control.

Police officials, having investigated themselves and given themselves complete exoneration, can be expected to give as little help as possible to any outside investigation. Already they are presenting carefully studied out alibis.

The higher-ups in business and politics who are the men behind the scenes in the control of the police department certainly will not come forward, unless compelled to.

Only by real courage and determination will Mr. Warner or any committee get anywhere in the investigation.

A good starting point would be, finally, the finding out the answer to the public's demand, "WHO RUNS THE POLICE DEPARTMENT, ANYHOW"?

Small, Swift, Deadly

We Need Ships Like This, NOT "Floating Forts"

GERMANY'S POCKET BATTLESHIP "DEUTSCHLAND"

On March 8, 1862, the Confederate ironclad ram Merrimac sank one wooden warship of the Federal Navy at Hampton Roads, Virginia, burned another, ran three more aground, and made every navy in the world obsolete.

Next day the Federal ironclad Monitor fought the Merrimac and made IT obsolete.

Those two days show you how quickly styles in warships can change.

They are mentioned here because styles in modern warships have changed almost as rapidly, though the German navy seems to be the only one that knows it.

In the opinion of many experts she has made the big "floating forts" in the British navy and our navy and the Japanese navy about as useful as wooden ships were when the Merrimac attacked them.

A "first class" battleship is two or three times as big as this ship.

It costs more.

It is slower.

It is a better target for airplanes, submarines, guns and surface torpedo boats.

In the last war the floating forts hid in harbor most of the time, and on the only occasion when they met in full force on the high seas they both went home.

The "pocket battleship," on the other hand, presents a small target to attack from the surface, or undersea, or the air.

She has six eleven-inch guns which can outrange and outhit anything a cruiser carries.

She can outrun any battleship afloat.

She has Diesel engines instead of steam.

She is built of super-hard steel, her hull is electrically welded, and she can cruise 10,000 miles at a speed of 20 knots without refueling.

She is small, swift, handy, dangerous—and compared with a floating fort—CHEAP.

We are about to build 32 war craft of various sizes immediately, and a full "treaty navy" eventually.

Many Americans wonder whether the government will spend vast sums on a few big, outdated floating forts, or whether it will put the money into a larger number of these new and EFFICIENT pocket battleships.

Navies are run by old men, and comparatively few old men take kindly to new ideas.

Don't be surprised, therefore, if you see plans announced for the building of more floating forts, which will have to hide in harbor in the next war as they did in the last.

The Confederate navy didn't think much of the Merrimac, until it sank the Union fleet.

The Union navy didn't think much of the Monitor, until it chased the Merrimac up the river.

It takes a war to make most of us think, and the gentlemen in charge of navies are no exception.

You Can Buy Labrador for One Hundred Million; Bargain; Dr. Grenfell's Works

By Edwin C. Hill

If you happen to have a hundred million dollars which is not working, make an offer to Newfoundland for its territory of Labrador. It should be a gilt-edge investment, and is made possible by the recent offer of Newfoundland to sell Labrador for that sum.

That great and good man, Sir Wilfred Grenfell, tells us that Labrador at a hundred million would be a rattling good bargain for anybody—too good to be true. Dr. Grenfell believes (and none should know better) that unexplored Newfoundland contains fabulously rich mineral treasures, and has advised Newfoundland not to sell under any conditions.

No man knows remote, unmapped Labrador so well as this Good Samaritan. For more than 35 years he has fought the good fight against the demons of cold, ice, disease and famine in the lonely and frozen wastes. He has shown the Eskimos and the Indians how to live intelligently, like human beings rather than beasts. He has taught the fisherfolk the meaning of Christianity

Ordinarily man goes to the ends of the earth for gold, glory or the sheer thrill of adventure. But Wilfred Grenfell went to the bleak-ice-locked land of Labrador for the love of God and the brotherhood of man. It was away back in the 80's, that he heard a sermon preached in England by the great evangelist, Dwight L. Moody. That sermon changed Dr. Grenfell's whole life. He made up his mind that the souls of men needed physicians even more than their ailing bodies, especially forgotten men, dwelling in distant places.

When he was graduated from Oxford and had completed his medical studies, he took ship and crossed the Atlantic and went to Labrador. He found misery, ignorance, starvation, hopelessness. And then and there he began his life's work—one of the finest achievements to the credit of mankind. He built his first hospital, a humble affair. He established co-operative stores. He married the living and buried the dead. He began to teach the young and the old. He learned to accept as a commonplace the savage minds, the terrible cold, the horror of the white, eternal silence. All of it he endured, smiling, eagerly, in order that those primitive people, so like children, could receive his aid.

Dr. Grenfell is 67 now, a frail man, so frail that the light of goodness which burns in his soul glows through his material body and casts about him an aura of saintliness. His steady blue eyes twinkle like the Northern Lights at play. His face is deeply tanned, bronzed by half a lifetime of sun and wind. His hair is white.

But after all these years the world has come to know about the long years of sacrifice. College men and women have joined him in his unselfish service. Four hospitals have been established in Labrador. Industrial and social work has grown. Universities have honored him with degrees. King George has conferred knighthood upon the dauntless soul responsible for it all. Indeed, he should have been made a noble lord, an earl or duke, if such rewards are any measure of the value of such service. For seldom in the sweep of history does one encounter a nobler spirit.

No peril or hardship ever daunted Sir Wilfred in all those bitter-hard years of his almost hopeless labors in Labrador. For there is steel in the soul of this knight of Christianity.

In the blackness of a winter's night, when the winds, sweeping down from the Arctic, cut like a knife and the half-wild sledge dogs were howling at the driving gale, Dr. Grenfell received a call to attend a sick Indian woman. With his dog team he set out over a frozen arm of the sea, making his way through snow and storm toward an Indian village. The wind increased in violence. The ice broke up. Dr. Grenfell and his dogs were caught among the booming, crackling floes, facing almost certain death.

By a desperate effort, he pulled himself out upon a block of ice, after he had been plunged into the freezing water. Then he rescued his dogs, one by one. His clothing froze solidly upon him. He knew that he would certainly freeze to death unless he killed some of the dogs and made their hides serve him as a fur coat against those terrible Arctic blasts.

It was a matter of minutes, not hours; but nevertheless Grenfell hesitated until growing drowsiness warned him of the inevitable. And then, with sadness in his heart he killed three of his faithful dogs, skinned them and wrapped his body with their warm furs. All that night he huddled, bent double, with the remaining dogs grouped closely around him, telling himself that if it was God's will that his life should end so, he was willing to accept the summons.

But with the coming of the morning light there was a shout across the ice. Rescue was at hand. His work was to go on—this man who had looked upon death and smiled in its face.

Sidewalk Cafes

O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, July 19—Brightly expectant sidewalk cafes bloom everywhere. The Brevoort now has one on the avenue. For years the Cafe Royal on Second avenue had the only outside tables. Bustanoby tried it 15 years ago on upper Broadway but it did not click. Martin's effort, too, failed.

Today there are 27 in Manhattan and 11 in Brooklyn. And perhaps that many more scattered in nearby suburban towns. Coney Island has three going full blast and many more are planned. Roller skating, bicycling and terasse dining are, of course, symbols of the new leisure in living.

Five years ago the sidewalk cafe would have been considered a bourgeois gesture. New Yorkers were keyed to a speedier hub-bub. Now they seem content to sit quietly and watch Life flow by with the ticking variety of the topical events at the cinema.

With the al fresco experiment has spawned the usual superfluous nuisances—the strolling musician, magician, bonnety old ladies who sell wilted flowers and even the hawker of strip postcards. But they are minor annoyances. The real joy is that honorable simplicity comes to a muddled world.

Despite new simplicities a complexity bobs up here and there. For instance the postcard today: "Say Toy Boat quickly ten times." I telegraphed him collect to try the same thing with: "Entire Tire Territory."

Out of shadows of East 49th street near Park avenue last night, a marrowy figure popped to inquire: "How about a nice ride to Coney?" I shook my head and walked on. "We'll stop on the way and meet some swell dames!" he called. So I turned, irritated to be taken for a yokel, and talked nastily. He listened, seemed contrite and explained: "It's a tough way to make a living but I've done everything else and when you have five children and a sick wife—" the voice trailed off into a whispering choke. So I gave him a dollar and learn today it's a new racket. Pick out a fellow that will give you back talk and then make him ashamed! Nine times out of ten the dunce will loosen.

Faith Baldwin, who has about the prettiest of feminine writing names, is one of the most prolific and speedy fiction writers. Aside from two novels a year she turns out several serials, innumerable short stories and is a frequent broadcaster. Also one of Brooklyn's slim contributions to the field of modern literature. She is married, has two children and her writing name is not a pseudonym but her maiden tag. Intensely domestic she is seldom seen at literary teas and other horrors of writing folk.

A close friend is a dentist. We launched our New York careers the same year and have kept contacts. Through him I met other dentists. My friend as well as his associates are about the cleanest living men I know. The dentists in our town were all high-grade citizens and excellent family men. There is no analogy between dentistry and domesticity, yet six persons I have talked to about the matter today said every dentist they knew notched high domestically.

Columns were written several months ago about the best frocked women. Most mentioned struck me as flash dressers with nebulous tastes. The dashing Lilyan Tashman et al! They mistake a lot of clothes for style. New York first nights and Hollywood premieres bring out the best dressed women. The most flamboyantly garbed get attention but are far from being correctly gowned. In New York, for example, one of the most perfectly groomed ladies is Mrs. Will Hays. Their costumes have a sedate chic that may only be described as fastidious. A fastidiousness that would not palpitate those who admire the gaudier gown pretensions.

Howard Acton and I dropped over to Brooklyn the other sundown to see a couple of scrub teams battle on a sandlot. Baseball has not changed. Best players are still worst dressed. I had the niftiest suit but invariably fanned.

My superior fault—and many perpetuate the idea through life—was not standing up to the plate. I twittered at in-shoots but was a push-over for one of those leisurely roundhouse out-curves. I'd swing—oof!—and miss it a mile.

Five Moscow cooks have been sentenced to death for putting nails in the food. What's the penalty for a waiter who sticks his thumb in the soup? Boiling oil?

It's just like war days in Washington now, even to the historic old excuse about the man you want to see being "in conference."

Columbus sailed the ocean blue;

Hail, Balbo! Thou hast proved again
The virtue of thy ancient strain.

In fact, Gen. Balbo comes mighty close to being a Balboa.

Just Folks

While a Friend Undergoes an Operation

'Tis nine o'clock! How strange the day!
This minute o'er him sleeping stands
A surgeon calm, with skilful hands
To cut the painful part away.
Now to his flesh the knife is laid
And I am sitting here—afraid!

I know above his form they bend
To make him well and strong again.
That ethered body is my friend,
The kindliest and best of men.
Work quickly, surgeon, that I may
Put all these dreadful thoughts away.

Within that spotless room I know
Precisely what it is they do.
The white-robed nurses come and go.
The instruments I plainly view.
An hour to wait! 'Twill seem a year
Again till word from him I hear.

Now, troubled, at my desk I stay
And put in feeble words the prayer
That God my friend to me will spare
And help him through this painful day
Ring, telephone, your little bell
And bring me word that all is well!
